Wages for Mothers
Don't Try for Riches
More Quintuplets
Flying Trapeze Girl

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.

Dr. Emily Pierson says wage-earning women should be paid by government and be allowed to rest during the child-bearing period.

Does that sound unreasonable? The government clothes, feeds and pays men that go out to fight, giving them bonuses and pensions afterwards. It might well pay brief wages to women that supply the fighters. Soldiers would not change places with them at childbirth time.

Charles M. Schwab, leaving for Europe, advises young men: "Don't strive for riches. I have worked hard all my life and have accomplished much—but it means nothing."

Mr. Schwab, bound for Nauheim baths, good for the heart, knows that money means little, and these are opportune times for taking the advice NOT TO GET RICH.

Schwab knows that piling up a few millions, as he has done, is no more than "breaking eighty" at golf, and not as good for the health.

Another set of quintuplets were added to the world's baby population, for a time. These are born to a gypsy woman on a farm in Transylvania, three of them boys and two girls. The five were born in the field after the mother, Maria Linguraru, 25, had gone out to work. Born prematurely, as were the Canadian quintuplets, the babies had no doctor to help them. As in all similar cases, except the Dionnes, these children, lacking expert care, are not expected to live. However, the case will interest all mothers.

Miss Olivera, her trapeze work perfect, her English not quite, fell, was hurt, but is back flying through the air, dropping one trapeze, catching another. She asks, "Who could live without excitement?"

Only one thing makes her superstitious, the trumpeting of elephants. Also, when she dreams, as she often does, that the trapeze breaks, she does not like that, only "always I wake up before I hit the ground."

Evolutionists will tell her the dream dates back to a time when our ancestors lived in trees; the sleeping baby fell from the limb, caught a branch, saved himself and crawled back. Falling in sleep became deeply planted in his subconscious mind.

Bob Sherwood, once P. T. Barnum's "champion acrobatic clown of the world," about to celebrate his 80th birthday, writes that time has passed "since we sat at the ringside to witness John L. Sullivan chase Charley Mitchell around the twenty-four foot ring near Chantilly, France."

Unfortunately, it is not time, but ourselves that pass. Time remains.

The children are full grown that, at Fort Dodge, Iowa, on July 13, 1880, sat under the big tent and trembling with excitement read P. T. Barnum's announcement: "Bob Sherwood, champion acrobatic clown of the world, in a double somersault over two elephants and six horses." Bob Sherwood could not do that now, and wonders how he could ever do it, but he enjoys life.

There must be a line added for the fearless Madamoiselle Zazel, who watched Sherwood jump over the elephants and then, in Barnum's words, "leaps into space in her terrific aerial dive or eagle swoop, after which she is shot from the mouth of a monstrous cannon and projected over sixty feet."

She is probably dead now, rest her soul; no constitution could stand that.

What a pity Barnum had to die!

Haile Selassie gives up his "Imperial Headquarters" at Dessye without a fight; the Italians are within 145 miles of Addis Ababa, the capital. There seems little chance of prolonged resistance unless Europe interferes seriously, and England seems to have decided against that. Mussolini holds every important caravan route leading to the capital.

Pictures of anti-religious rioting in Spain, published in the Paris Illustration, show church towers blazing, furniture thrown out of houses of the aristocracy made into a bonfire. In the ruins of a big hall of the organization of Catholic workers in Madrid, children from ten to fifteen years old are shown enthusiastically raising their closed fists to the burned roof in the Communist salute.

We live in troubled days, but the future will learn, as the past has learned, that the way to get anything worthwhile is to work for it. Too bad, but that is the rule.

Holden Tax Man Tells:

'How I Lost Town's Thousands on Races'

Worcester, April 16—"Crooks" at the horse race tracks ruined him, forced him to dip into thousands of dollars of Holden's town accounts, George H. Newell told the Boston Evening American today.

The former tax collector, who is 36, married and father of two children was back from Miami, in custody of state police, to face larceny charges in court here.

Newell heard the court told that the shortage would probably reach $20,000. He waived examination and was held for the May grand jury in $10,000 bail. He had no lawyer.

"On one race alone," Newell told police and reporters, "I lost $2000 and I guess no one else—except those that were 'in'—won anything, either.

"But I'm glad it's over. When I was arrested it took a big load off my mind. The tension was getting unbearable after a year of it."

Newell came back home in custo-

STOCKS MIXED

New York, April 16 (INS)—With trading dropping to a snail's pace, the stock market moved in an extremely narrow range today after a moderate rally at the start.

Coppers, aviations and foods turned in the best performances. Steels and motors, recent leaders on the upside, were inclined to softness.

BELGIAN HELD IN THREATS

Brussels, April 16 (AP)—A threat to kidnap the three motherless children of King Leopold of the Belgians was disclosed today with the arrest at Liege, eastern Belgium, of a 31-year-old former convict, Nicholas Elsen.

Police of the city of Liege said the arrested man confessed to writing letters to the King, threatening to abduct the royal children, whose mother, Queen Astrid, was killed in an automobile accident, unless money was left in woods near the border city.

Police said they laid in wait twice in the woods, in an attempt to capture the author of the letters, but that he failed to appear.

The writer was finally traced, the police said, through a reference in one letter to the fact that the

'SAW DR. MACKEY,' WITNESS ASSERTS IN SCHOOL TRIAL

$5,000,000 BOND RACKET REVEALED

EXCLUSIVE!

William R. (Spilly) Evans of Boston, originator of the boldest of all bank robbery methods, and a fugitive from this state for six years, was in custody with eight other men today in connection with the theft of $590,000 in bonds in 1934.

G. Edgar Hoover, chief G-man, revealed the holding of these men, as a result of disclosures published exclusively in yesterday's Boston Evening American.

Today the Boston Evening American publishes the inside story of the alleged operations of the bond gang, upon some of whom the Department of Justice hopes eventually to pin thefts totaling $5,000,000.

HELD IN NEW YORK

Held with Evans in New York City are Theodore Crowley of Boston; Charles Hartman, Gabriel Marosi and Earl Palmer of New York; Paul Alexander of Washington, and Rocco and George De-Grasei of West Palm Beach.

The ninth member of the group, Melvin S. Smith, was arrested in Topeka, Kan., last June, and is awaiting trial at Kansas City on a charge of violating the Federal Stolen Property Law.

Evans, Hartman, Marosi and Palmer all face arraignment before

Maine Delegation Seeks Quoddy Cash

Washington, April 16 (AP)—The Maine congressional delegation will meet tomorrow to discuss means of obtaining funds to carry on construction of the Passamaquoddy Bay power project.

The meeting was called as supporters of the project considered a personal plea to the President and the possibility of modification in plans as the only hope for continua of the project.

Crash Kills Motorcyclist

Cranston, R. I., April 16—Wilmer J. Diros, 25, of Washington avenue, Norwood, R. I., was killed today when his motorcycle crashed into a tree.

Gem Thief Seized In Back Bay Chase

A pedestrian's flying tackle today captured a paroled ex-convict fleeing with $1000 worth of diamond rings after a noon-day theft in the exclusive Boylston street shop of Shreve, Crump & Low.

Police gunfire, a clanging burglar alarm, spectacular pursuit and the football climax threw Back Bay crowds in the vicinity of Boylston, Arlington and Berkeley streets into an uproar.

The captured suspect, identifying himself as Ralph Amato of Westland avenue and telling a pitiful story of illness, unemployment and "first offense," aroused the compassion of the police until they took his fingerprints.

Then they announced he was Nicholas Bruno, paroled a year ago after being sentenced to state prison for five years for armed robbery. He has a long and varied record, and will be questioned concerning other jewel thefts and robberies in Boston during recent months.

THROWN TO PAVEMENT

He was thrown to the pavement in the middle of Berkeley street, at Boylston, after running a block from the scene of the theft.

Attracted by the sound of the alarm, a warning shot fired by Sergeant Mark Leonard and the noises of pursuit, Edward Doyle of Parker Hill street, Roxbury, made the flying tackle of Bruno and held him until Leonard arrived.

The thief, well dressed, entered Shreve, Crump & Low's store shortly before noon and requested Hayward Macomber, a salesman, to show him some engagement rings.

After some discussion of values, Macomber placed five rings valued at $200 each on the counter. The thief seized the small tray and darted into Boylston street.

SHOUTS "STOP THIEF"

Macomber stepped on the burglar alarm button, vaulted the counter and ran after the fugitive, shouting:

"Stop him, he's a thief!"

Sergeant Leonard, in civilian clothes and on his way to police headquarters, fired the single shot and joined the chase which ended as Doyle threw his tackle at the fleeing man. Leonard held Bruno at gunpoint until a cruising car arrived. Bruno was booked on suspicion of larceny. He told police he was unmarried.

ATTEMPTS ESCAPE

As the prisoner was being taken from the patrol wagon in the garage at the Back Bay station house, he suddenly broke the grip of Sergeant Mark Leonard, who was holding him, and dashed for the door.

Leonard was too quick for the fugitive, however. He overtook him and subdued him.

Curley Staff Raises Rejected

On a voice vote, the House today restored to the state budget $350,000 to provide for annual step-rate increases in salaries of state employes.

By a count of 79-128, a move by Representative Edward J. Kelley of Worcester to raise the appropriation for salaries and expenses of the governor's staff was defeated.

The governor asked $56,000. The ways and means committee cut it to $40,640. The cut stands. Democrats swung over with Republicans to defeat the increase.

Out of a total of 722 budget items, 97 were passed.

Hopkins Allots Flood Funds Here

Washington, April 16 (AP)—Making the first allotments from his $25,000,000 flood rehabiliation fund, Harry L. Hopkins today approved Works Progress Administration projects in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine and Pennsylvania, involving outlays of $5,200,061.

Projects were approved for Connecticut to cost 2,531,357; Maine, $1,412,277; Pennsylvania, $523,208, and Massachusetts, $733,219.

MUSIC POST APPLICANT BARES VISIT

Two months after applying for the music director's post in Boston schools, he was taken by James W. Hawkes to the South Boston office of Dr. Charles E. Mackey, then chairman of the school committee, it was testified today in Superior court by Raymond A. Crawford, music director in Waltham schools.

The testimony was given at the trial of Hawkes, a Waltham music instructor, and John J. Devlin, Charlestown restaurant owner, on charges growing out of the school job probe last fall.

According to their grand jury testimony, introduced at this trial before Judge David F. Dillon and a locked jury, Hawkes and Devlin have accused each other of instigating the alleged plot to sell the music supervisor's job.

According to the grand jury testimony, Devlin said he told Joseph Wagner, a Boston schools music instructor, on instructions from Hawkes, that Wagner could have the supervisor's post on payment of $2000, and that later this price was reduced to $1400.

BLAMES DEVLIN

Authorship of the alleged plot was charged to Devlin, however, by Hawkes, according to the latter's grand jury testimony.

A Job for American Mothers

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I AM not a politician.

To be perfectly frank with you, the governmental issues of this country do not deeply interest me any more than they do any other normal woman save in one respect—

I AM A MOTHER.

Motherhood is my principal profession—the rearing of children is my chief concern. I will do anything to help a child—I will also dare anything to save a child from certain danger. Because of this, I am speaking today to the other mothers of America.

Stop darning those stockings, Mary. Lift your hands and head from your biscuit making, Anne. There is a job for us to do and it needs all the spiritual courage of fine American motherhood to do that job right.

For today there is a danger menacing American children greater than any peril in our history—more cruel than any flood, more ruthless than anv fire, more devastating than any plague.

AND THAT DANGER IS THE TEACHING OF COMMUNISM IN OUR AMERICAN SCHOOLS.

NOW I am perfectly willing to admit that Communism may suit certain foreigners who were born that way and whose mental pattern runs in that peculiar design. Just as I am willing to admit that cannibalism may suit other certain foreigners—or even more quaint but unprintable habits.

But as an American mother I am not concerned with such foreigners nor interested in their habits. I am concerned only with the American ideal of Democracy to which I was bred and which shall always seem to me the noblest dream that has ever entered man's mind or stirred his soul.

As a woman, that dream is my highest ideal—as a mother I believe it to be my duty to implant that ideal in the children whose lives I serve and mold. And I, therefore, resist and resent Communism with all the force of my being.

Admittedly the practice of Democracy is not perfect. Any more than the practice of Christianity is perfect. But are we Americans to turn Buddhist, Mohammedan or fire worshippers merely because we do not perfectly follow the trail set by Jesus of Nazareth? By the same token, are we to discard that priceless heritage left us by our battling forefathers—that tall and shining dream of freedom and equality—because we cannot as yet perfectly demonstrate Democracy in our daily practice?

Democracy suits the American soul. It is deeper than a matter of politics—it is something that is bred in our bone and our blood. It fits our spiritual desire. We Americans believe in a man's right to be an individual—not merely to be an obscure unit in a mass as a Communist. We believe in a man's right to go as far and as high as his individual genius will permit him, provided he does not harm his neighbor by so doing or injure his weaker brother.

In short, we Americans believe in the evolution of individuals . . . believe that God meant man to rise to his fullest possible stature as an individual. And in that belief we rear our children.

WE Americans believe these things because this nation was founded, not by a revolting mass of stupid and inflamed peasants, but by the courageous deeds of inspired individuals—men who dared stake all they had on the issue of personal liberty. From our very beginning a man's right to be his largest self has been our most sacred, national principle.

But Communists do not believe these things. Communists have devised for themselves some excellent institutions—some admirable laws. But at no place in their program do they advocate the right of the individual to rise above the level of the weaker or more stupid mass about him. Democracy advocates and promotes personal freedom and power. Communism fights that right to the last bloody trench and proclaims and promotes the right of the mass to rule and submerge the individual.

Under Democracy the poorest boy in America may become President. Under Communism he would until the end of his days be only a unit in a herd.

And now comes some of the most seemingly enlightened men in America—professors in our largest universities—and insist that teachers in our American public schools have as much right to teach Communism to immature minds as they have to teach Democracy. And that we, the mothers of America, the taxpayers, the supporters of the American educational system, have no right to stop them. As I write, Professors George S. Counts and Charles A. Beard of Columbia University are waging a bitter fight in Washington, D. C., against all those who would restrain such teaching or who would dare insist that American children be reared by our chosen American pattern of life.

I REPEAT, I am no politician. Nor am I any Columbia College graduate. But at least I have the normal common sense of the plain thinking American worker which I am—and the spunk of a two-fisted American mother. And I hereby protest that the demands of the erudite Profesors Counts and Beard are completely cockeyed and cuckoo and that these learned gentlemen themselves are but one degree removed from nudists, human flies, tree sitters and other crackpots.

The trouble with you, boys, is that we taxpayers have kept you coddled on your campus for so long that you've forgotten what regular living is like or what it has cost.

The liberty of the common man means nothing to you—you never see beyond his grammar or mental test.

The rights of the common man move you not at all.

You are concerned merely with your own theories for which, as campus cutups, you will never have to pay a penny since—whatever may come—the taxpayer must, as always, pay the bill.

What you need is a pair of patched overalls and 60 days sweating labor down some manhole. After which, I'm betting, you'd appreciate individual liberty and those who handed it to you gratis and who bought it for you at the price of their own lives.

I GIVE not one whoop, gentlemen, what the inhabitants of Russia, Mongolia, Persia, Ecuador or Lapland do with themselves or their children. But this is America. And I was not only born an American, but, at that birth, I inherited the priceless treasure and responsibility which is the birthright of every American. Men agonized to achieve the liberty into which I was born, and women broke their hearts for it.

The trail by which I have climbed is blood-stained—every step of it—by the noblest struggle mankind ever made. As a child I saw my own father and mother struggling, as California pioneers, to civilize America's far frontier. As a woman I have profited at every turn by that vision upon which America was founded.

Show me any method by which that vision may be better served or further expanded—any method which will more greatly help the American worker or serve the American ideal of liberty and justice—and I will fight for it to the last shred of my endurance.

BUT I WILL BLOCK IF NEED BE WITH MY DYING BODY ANYONE OR ANYTHING WHICH SHALL TRY TO IMPOSE UPON OUR FREE AMERICAN SPIRIT THE PATTERN OF THE MASS BOUND RUSSIAN SERF! AND WHETHER THE ADVOCATE OF SUCH A PROCESS COMES FROM THE HELL CAMPS OF SIBERIA OR THE CORRIDORS OF COLUMBIA, I AS AN AMERICAN INDIVIDUAL AND AN AMERICAN MOTHER, BRAND HIM AS PUBLIC ENEMY NUMBER ONE—AND A COMPLETE IDIOT IN ADDITION THERETO.

PLOT TO SELL SCHOOL JOB BARED AT TRIAL OF TWO

street, West Roxbury, testified today, under questioning by Assistant District Attorney Frederick T. Doyle, that he has been supervisor of music in Waltham schools for the past 10 years and has known Hawkes, an instructor in drums for the schools, during six of those years.

Last September, Crawford testified, he filed application for the Boston music director's post and subsequently talked with Hawkes three or four times about the matter.

"Have you ever met Dr. Mackey?" the witness was asked by Doyle.

"Yes," Crawford replied.

POINTS OUT MACKEY

The assistant prosecutor turned toward the spectators' section and said:

"Stand up, Dr. Mackey."

Dr. Mackey stood up in the front row.

"Is that the man you met?" asked Doyle.

"Yes," answered Crawford.

Q—Do you recall when you met Dr. Mackey? A—I think it was on November 12, 1935.

Q.—Who brought you to Dr. Mackey's office? A.—I asked Mr. Hawkes to take me there.

Q.—And was Mr. Hawkes in Dr. Mackey's office with you? A.—Yes.

Q.—And did Mr. Hawkes introduce you to Dr. Mackey? A.—No, he didn't. I remember that Dr. Mackey turned to me, thinking I was Mr. Hawkes, and Mr. Shea said, "No, this is Mr. Crawford." Then Dr. Mackey shook hands with me.

Q.—And you and Mr. Shea and Mr. Hawkes were in Dr. Mackey's office in Broadway, South Boston? A.—Yes.

"That is all," said Assistant District Attorney Doyle quickly.

TESTIMONY READ

Hawkes' grand jury testimony, given last January 2, was read into the records by Assistant District Attorney Garrett H. Byrne and Miss Gertrude E. Maloney, grand jury secretary.

Before the grand jury, Hawkes said he lived in Dunster road, Jamaica Plain, and had been a musician for 30 years. He declared he had worked with Devlin, also a musician, for several years, but did not know Wagner.

Hawkes said he might recognize Wagner on the street, but only through seeing his photographs in the newspapers.

VISITED HAWKES

Neither did Hawkes know any Boston school committee members, he said, except through reading about them. He said he thought he would recognize Dr. Mackey through the newspaper pictures.

According to Hawkes' testimony, Devlin and his wife visited Hawkes' home about the middle of last December to talk about the school affair. Hawkes told the grand jury:

"Devlin said, 'Jim, do you know anything about that conversation?' I said, 'About what?' He said, 'About Wagner—do you remember telling me that Wagner could have the job for $2000?' I said, 'No.'

"Devlin said, 'Do you remember telling me later on that he could have the job for $1400?' I said, 'No, Jack, you've got your wires crossed.'"

Hawkes further testified that Devlin, from Hawkes' home, then telephoned Attorney James H. Brennan, who is Devlin's counsel, but the purpose of the call Hawkes did not know.

Afterward, according to the testimony, Devlin asked Hawkes if he could get someone who knew Dr. Mackey "to see what can be done about Wagner."

When the Devlins had gone, one of Hawkes' four sisters—they are all teachers—warned him, the witness said, that Devlin was trying to "put you on the spot."

Later, Devlin telephoned Hawkes and spoke of the Wagner matter again, the testimony ran, but Hawkes replied he was not interested.

Hawkes testified that the subject of Wagner first came up and was broached to Hawkes when he dropped into Devlin's restaurant in Sullivan square, Charlestown, in late September or early October.

According to the witness, he had gone to the restaurant to seek Devlin's aid in Hawkes' campaign for election as vice-president of the Musicians' Union, to which both belonged.

TEACHER JOBS

At the time, according to Hawkes' testimony, Devlin said:

"If we get Wagner this position, then we can have positions as teachers in the Boston schools."

"I told him I wasn't interested," said Hawkes.

Before the grand jury, Hawkes claimed he did not know Dr. Mackey, but admitted knowing someone who was trying to contact the school committeeman to get the director's job for Wagner.

Devlin told him, Hawkes said, that Wagner was willing to pay as high as $1000 for the post.

Hatch to Head N. E. Boy Scouts

Providence, April 16 (AP)—Francis W. Hatch of Boston was elected chairman of the New England region of the Boy Scouts of America at the annual meeting of Boy Scout executives from all over New England here this morning.

Other members of the committee with terms expiring in 1939 elected today were Sumner T. Packard, Springfield, Mass.; Daniel R. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.; Alex W. Moffat, Brookline, Mass.; F. C. P. Drummond, Providence; Dr. Frederick R. Rogers, Boston, and Dwight C. Wheeler, Bridgeport, Conn.

Snake Haven

Detroit, April 16 (INS) — Touched when she learned police killed "a perfectly beautiful snake," Mrs. L. C. Hughes-Hallett, wife of the British consul here, today offered a home to all stray snakes.

She appealed to police and the public not to kill snakes, but call her at once when one is found. Police Inspector Henry J. Garvin said Mrs. Hughes-Hallett's appeal would be read at all police roll calls today.

Radcliffe Votes on War

PEGGY HARRIS VIRGINIA MacDONALD

There will be two days of balloting at Radcliffe College. Four polling places on the campus opened today where students register their opinions on such questions as the abolition of war, compulsory military training in college and the support of the United States in case of invasion. At the right, Virginia MacDonald, president of the student body, is being tagged by Peggy Harris after she voted.

HOFFMAN AIDES FACE ARREST

New York, April 16 (INS)—Several of New Jersey's highest office holders will soon be indicted for the kidnaping of Paul Wendel.

At least six close henchmen of Governor Harold G. Hoffman face the threat of life imprisonment for their part in the abduction, the Evening Journal said today in an exclusive story from Trenton.

"When the names of those who are scheduled for arrest in this case hit the public print, it will cause the biggest scandal seen around the East in many years," the Journal quoted its informant as saying.

It was expected that Wendel will be released in nominal bail today or tomorrow so he can accompany District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan to Brooklyn to aid in the investigation into his kidnaping

Textile Bill OK'd by House Group

Washington, April 16 (AP)—The House labor committee with two dissenting votes, today approved the Ellenbogen Bill for Federal regulation of the textile industry.

The vote was 10 to 2, with Rep. Ramspeck (D-Ga) and Hartley (R-NJ), opposing the bill on constitutional grounds.

Chairman Connery (R-Mass), of the labor committee said he would ask a rule to bring the measure before the House at this session.

The measure would set up a textile commission with authority to establish minimum wages for various classes of labor on the basis of a 35-hour week. The commission would have power to regulate production through curtailment of operations.

CHECK PRINTS ON BED IN 'TUB SLAYER' HUNT

New York, April 16 (INS)—With the mystery growing hourly more complex and insoluble, detectives today were checking and classifying five blurred fingerprints in their hunt for the perpetrator of the "bathub murder" of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton.

The prints, brought out on the polished headboard of Mrs. Titterton's bed by the new silver nitrate process, admittedly offered the police only the slimmest sort of clue.

FULLY CLOTHED

They have not yet been checked against the prints of Mrs. Titterton herself, her husband, or the maid, or any other person, who may have had innocent reason to touch the bed.

Meanwhile police officials professed themselves as mystified as reporters by the cryptic utterance of Dr. Alexander O. Gettler, city toxicologist:

"I will have a definite clue to the murder in two or three days. I know now in my own mind what the spots are on the bedspread I examined, but I will not reveal any further information until I am sure that my facts are scientifically correct."

ACTOR QUESTIONED

Last night police questioned Clarence Seligman, a 26-year-old actor, who was taken to Bellevue Hospital's psychopathic ward from his home suffering from an extreme form of nervous tension called "anxiety neuroses," but absolved him of all connection with the crime.

Suspicion was directed toward him, it was said, because of the presence of fresh fingernail scratches on his face. Physicians declared, however, that Seligman probably scratched himself. It is not uncommon for victims of this form of mental trouble to scratch themselves, it was said.

Malden Man Dies On B. & M. Train

Stricken with a heart attack as he rode towards Melrose from Malden on a Boston & Maine train, Thorwald Johnson, 52, of 547 Highland avenue, Malden, a Melrose marketman, was pronounced dead on arrival at the Melrose Hospital. He is survived by a widow, Gladys T. Johnson.

$222 a Tick

Washington, April 16 (US) — Every time the clock ticks the Roosevelt "New Deal" spends $222, the Republican Congressional committee announced today after a bit of compilation.

Expenditures are at the rate of $7,008,000,000 a year or $584,000,000 a month or $19,000,000 a day, etc., etc.

The committee said the figures do not include the soldiers' bonus and the additional one and one-half billions asked for unemployment relief.

N. E. Freight Battle

Emergency Rates Hit by Experts

New England transportation experts, at an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing in Boston today, opposed the indefinite continuation of emergency freight rates now in effect among the railroads.

The hearing was before J. C. McGrath of Washington, interstate examiner, on the petition of Class I railroads for authority to continue the emergency schedules without an expiration date. The emergency rates are scheduled by limitation to expire June 30.

ROADS INTERESTED

New England railroads interested in the petition are the Boston & Maine, Boston & Albany and New York, New Haven & Hartford.

The hearing was held at Hotel Lenox.

Willingness to have the emergency schedules remain effective until the end of the year was voiced by William H. Day, manager of the transportation bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and representative of the New England Traffic League, and J. F. Atwater, manager of transportation for the American Hardware Corporation of New Britain, Conn. Both opposed indefinite continuation.

OPPOSE CONTINUATION

Morris W. Ford, traffic manager of the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, representing 700 manufacturers, opposed any continuation beyond the set date of expiration.

Day said the emergency schedule created undue preference and prejudice between different classes of traffic and shippers, and that it would be unsound to make permanent any such "hodge-podge" rate adjustment as now prevails.

Day argued that if the rail carriers wish to make some of the emergency provisions permanent they should specify which ones.

Union Loaded With Spies, He Says

Washington, April 16 (AP)—Emil Rieve, president of the Hosiery Workers' Federation, told a Senate labor sub-committee today his union was loaded with labor spies.

Reports on every local meeting, Rieve said, went to the employers through private detective agencies.

Asked by Senator LaFollette (P.-Wis.) how he knew this, Rieve replied the union had been forced to "fight fire with fire"—to hire spies of its own to spy on the spies.

Skull Fractured Twice in 5 Months

New Haven, Conn., April 16 (INS)—Early in November, Jacob Jaffe, 26, was hurled through an automobile door, suffered a fractured skull, and recovered.

Today he again suffered a fractured skull when he was struck by a transportation company truck operated, police said, by Charles Pfilos, 27, of Boston.

$10,000 Left To Lawyer By Recluse

Because he performed legal services without making any charge, Rodney G. Page, formerly town counsel of Watertown, is the chief beneficiary in the will of Miss Gertrude E. Gunther, Waltham recluse, filed today in Middlesex probate court.

Page is made the reisduary legatee of her estate with the stipulation that the bequest shall be used, as far as he deems advisable, for the education of his daughter, Margaret.

Page, a Boston lawyer, lives at 366 School street, Watertown. Miss Gunther died at Waltham Hospital on April 4, after having been rescued from a fire in the one-room shack in which she lived on Amherst avenue, Waltham.

The estatt of the woman, who lived in poor circumstances, was reported at the time of her death to amount to $10,000. Today it was stated there are insurance policies of an undisclosed amount and six parcels of land, worth about $3000.

The will, made June 14, 1928, was on file at the Waltham National Bank with a letter explaining the reason for remembering Page. There are only two other bequests, $100 each to Mrs. Catherine MacDonald, Dana trrace, Watertown, a friend, and Mrs. Elizabeth J. M. Fuller of Chestnut street, Waltham, a schoolmate. No mention was made of two sisters of the deceased.

Attorney Robert W. McInaney fileed the will. Page is named executor.

Dr. Alport Attack Trial April 22

Brigadier-General Roger Eckfeldt president of the special court martial which will try Private Mario Cassenelli of Pittsfield, who allegedly struck Dr. Benjamin Alport of Springfield with his gun during the recent flood, announced today the trial will be held in Springfield Armory, Wednesday, April 22.

German-U. S. Test Flights Start Soon

Berlin, April 16 (AP)—The German air ministry announced today trial flights for a transatlantic air service between Germany and the United States will be started within a few months.

The service will be routed by way of the Azores Islands, Bermuda and Charleston, S. C.

RETTICH, THREE OTHERS SEEK NEW TRIALS

Before a crowd that jammed the courtroom and stood in aisles, arguments were begun today on the appeals of Carl Rettich and three others from sentences that sent them to Alcatraz Island prison for 25 years.

Rettich, Thomas Dugan, Charles Harrigan and John McGlone were four of the so-called Rhode Island "crime syndicate" convicted for the $129,000 Fall River mail robbery January 23, 1935.

Briefs of the appellants set forth that the constitutional rights of the four had been invaded by federal authorities and the points of argument were so important that a large percentage of the crowd in the courtroom were lawyers.

FOUR IN CELLS

The four whose fate rests on the decision of Justices George H. Brigham, Scott Wilson and James M. Morton, Jr., were not present.

They are cellmates of Al Capone and other celebrities of the underworld in the famed U. S. island penitentiary off California's coast.

But a battery of attorneys represented them. Maurice Palais was counsel for the brief and William R. Scharton, John J. Crehan and Joseph E. Fitzpatrick—the latter of Providence—were aligned with him.

80-PAGE BRIEF

Assistant U. S. Attorney John A. Canavan stood for the govenment. His brief covered 80 printed pages. That of the appellants covered 61 pages.

In short, the petitioners argue that the search of the Warwick (R. I.) estate of Carl Rettich was illegal, because the search warrants were executed in violation of the statutes.

They claim evidence which convicted the four men was gathered under these warrants and was therefore inadmissible.

They claim that $10,000 found buried on the premises was seized unlawfully and that a combination of these and other allegations caused the violation of the constitutional rights of Rettich and the others.

TRACES CASE

Attorney Scharton began arguments for the appellants and traced the case from its beginning, when, he said, Herbert H. Hornstein, government witness, was arrested in Hollywood and later held in Boston for three months.

The argument on the alleged illegality of the search warrants is based on grounds that the federal warrant was issued on April 24, 1935, and was returned May 13, 1935.

The appellants claim the statutes provide for execution of such warrants within ten days and that search under the warrant issued was for a period from April 27 to May 9, in violation of the law.

WOMAN Mercy Killer HANGS

MOTHER OF 5 GOES TO DOOM

Birmingham, Eng., April 16 (AP)—Mrs. Dorothy Waddingham, 34-year-old mother of five children, died on the gallows of Winson Green prison today while police guarded the approaches against a demonstration in protest at "this disgrace."

Mrs. Violet Van Der Elst, wealthy Londoner and energetic campaigner against capital punishment, organized the demonstration, broadcasting appeals to a crowd of 2000 to attempt to prevent the hanging.

The throng looked on quietly, however, some smiling at Mrs. Van Der Elst's exhortations, some praying for Mrs. Waddingham while the convicted poison slayer of a patient in her Nottingham nursing home died within the prison.

King Edward himself was the only one who could have saved the woman from the gallows by granting a last-minute reprieve, after Home Secretary Sir John Simon denied appeals for clemency.

A wave of protest throughout Britain over the hanging of the mother of five children, including a six-months-old baby, was countered by press statements, terming the poison death of the patient, 50-year-old Mrs. Louisa Baguley, a flagrant offense.

Ninth Woman

A last overnight appeal to the home office having been rejected, the nurse was led to the gallows and the trap was sprung shortly after 9 a. m. (4 a. m., E. S. T.), on the ninth woman to be executed in Great Britain since the start of the century.

Riding in a limousine equipped with a loud speaker, Mrs. Van Der Elst attempted to drive through the gates to the prison, but was turned back by police.

Her automobile bore a large sign reading:

"Men and women, I appeal to you to prevent the hanging of a mother. This barbaric age would hang the mother of five children."

Men walked through the streets bearing placards:

"Stop this terrible crime of hanging of a mother of five children."

"This Disgrace"

Police blocked off the streets leading to the prison, and 100 reserves were held in readiness at a nearby theater.

The state charged that Mrs. Waddingham poisoned her bedridden patient to obtain the 1000 pounds (about $8000) legacy which Mrs. Baguley had willed to her nurse.

Mrs. Van Der Elst complained that she had not been allowed to bring six airplanes from London to fly over the prison during the hanging and drop pamphlets protesting against "this disgrace."

2 More Boston Men Held in Hijacking

Taunton, April 16—Two more men from Boston, one a state prison convict, were arraigned here today in connection with the $12,000 truck hijacking on the Taunton-Fall River road last December. Abraham Wailles, 45, was in on a habeas corpus from the prison. The other man was William Hurst, 44. Both pleaded not guilty to conspiracy and their cases were continued.

Six others, also alleged to be members of a ring that operated between Boston and New York were also in court on a continuation of their hearings. Five cases were continued until April 27.

Rites Start Interior Building

Washington, April 16 (AP)—The cornerstone of the new $12,000,000 Interior Department Building was laid today by President Roosevelt, who pledged renewed federal efforts to conserve the nation's natural resources.

"As I view this serviceable new structure," the President said, "I like to think of it as symbolical of the nation's vast resources that we are sworn to protect, and this stone that I am about to lay as the cornerstone of a conservation policy that will guarantee to future Americans the richness of their heritage."

Secretary Ickes, summarizing efforts to prevent waste of natural resources on both private land and the public domain, called his chief "the greatest conservationist in American history."

The cabinet and other officials looked on as the President, using the trowel with which George Washington laid the cornerstone of the Capitol building in 1793, sealed within the foundation stone of the huge new structure, an American flag, a Bible, a pamphlet on the Constitution, a bronze medallion of himself, an autographed photograph of Ickes, and records showing present activities of the Interior Department.

Mulloney Plea Denied by Court

The motion asking for a speedy trial on one of the 13 indictments pending against Daniel C. Mulloney, president of the closed Federal National Bank, was dismissed by Judge Hugh D. McLellan in federal court today.

In dismissing it, Judge McLellan said the U. S. district attorney's office had caused no delay.

Mulloney is now serving a sentence at Plymouth jail. Atty. Marvin C. Taylor appeared for the defendant.

JAQUES Pre-Marital LOVES

HOUSEKEEPER GIVES DETAILS

Testimony that Henry F. Jaques and his present wife, Mrs. Ruth M. Anthony Jaques, lived together before their marriage, was heard by judge and jury in Suffolk court today.

Trial of the $50,00 suit for alleged alienation of Jaques' affections, brought against his present wife by his former spouse, Mrs. Louise P. Jaques of Brookline, continued before Judge Frederick B. Greenhalge.

Three witnesses for the plaintiff testified that Jaques and his present wife lived together in 1931. She was then the widow of Karl E. Anthony, who wounded her and shot himself in 1930.

Mrs. Hattie Libby of Dudley street Dorchester, said she served the couple as housekeeper at a Wayland home between June, 1931, and Christmas Eve of the same year when Jaques discharged her, telling her:

"We are being summoned into court and don't want you around here any longer."

She said Mrs. Anthony engaged her.

Seen in Room

Although Mrs. Anthony and Jaques ocupied separate rooms, Mrs. Libby testified, she saw Jaques frequently in Mrs. Anthony's room with a lounging robe over light attire.

Eleanor Reese testified that Jaques and Mrs. Anthony stayed for two weeks at her home in Melrose street, Auburndale, in March, 1931. She identified a photograph of Jaques.

Jaques' present wife was asked to stand.

"She is the woman," said Miss Rees.

She said that Mrs. Anthony was introduced to her as Mrs. Jaques.

A Wayland builder, Thomas Wentworth, said Jaques and Mrs. Anthony called on him in March, 1931, regarding a house in High street, Wayland, which he was offering for sale for $14,500. Later, he said, a deed was signed in the name of Jaques' sister, Mrs. Monte Morency.

Move In

Jaques and Mrs. Anthony took possession, he said, and although he was with them several times, she was never introduced to him. He said Jaques called the woman "Ruth" and that she called Jaques "Sugar."

He told of a disturbance at the house on April 19, and of Mrs. Anthony trying to tell him something the next day.

"I told her I preferred not to hear her troubles," Wentworth testified, but she told him of the shooting and that Jaques was only waiting for a divorce in order to marry her.

Pupils on Strike Close 3 Schools

Hazleton, Pa., April 16 (AP)—Two hundred striking students, whooping it up with a band and accompanied by adult sympathizers, started a march on Hazle township schools that failed to join the strike protesting the dismissal of a dozen instructors.

With two schools already closed, the strikers marched on a third attended by 162 pupils. Classes disbanded and the marchers moved on to another community. Thirteen more schools were on today's marching list.

Confronts Love Rival

Mrs. Louise Jaques of Brookline, who placed a price of $50,000 on lost love. She was photographed as she awaited the calling of the case in Suffolk Superior Court, in which she seeks that amount of money from Mrs. Ruth Anthony Jaques, present wife of her divorced husband.

SIX SERGEANTS SHIFTED TODAY

Six Boston police sergeants were transferred today as Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney made another move in his series of changes which began earlier this month with appointment of a new superintendent. Numerous other shifts, affecting sergeants and patrolmen, are expected in the near future.

Transferred today were: Patrick J. Morrissey from station 10, Roxbury Crossing, to station 11, Fields Corner, Dorchester; John F. Dunleavy, 10 to 13, Jamaica Plain; Joseph Maraghy, 10 to 15, Charlestown; Joseph J. Callahan, 11 to 10; Edward A. Carey, 13 to 10; and William H. Owen, 15 to 10.

The assignment of new sergeants to division 10 is said to have been made on request of Captain James Sheehan, who was transferred to Roxbury Crossing from the bureau of records at headquarters recently, with instructions to "clean up" vice in the district. Captain Sheehan was a student at the crime school conducted by G. Edgar Hoover, chief G-man, at Washington last fall.

He Found Out

Fryeburg, Me., April 16 (AP)—Percy Coombs stood in front of the firehouse when an alarm sounded today. Mildy curious, he inquired about the fire and was dismayed when firemen told him it was his new home, five miles out of town.

The house was destroyed.

THREATS To Townsend PROBERS

50 LETTERS AND PHONE CALLS

Los Angeles, April 16 (AP)—Reports of threats and a prediction of a "sensational break" came today from the congressional sub-committee investigating the Townsend pension fund organization.

Representative Gavagan, (D.) of New York disclosed that more than 50 threatening letters and telephone calls had been received since the inquiry started in southern California, birthplace of the pension movement.

He said the committee would continue its mission despite the threats and added that "acts of intimidation will be deal with by federal law."

At the same time Govagan announced that in a week there will be a sensational break involving national Townsend figures — the top boys."

He did not amplify his "prediction," made after he and Representative Collins (R.), California, returned from a secret trip "somewhere north of Los Angeles."

Bomb Killings Linked to Suicide

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 16 (AP)—Federal and state authorities looked today to the probable suicide of a miner who blew himself to bits with dynamite deep in a coal mine as a possible "break" in their investigation of the "Easter Gift" bomb outrages which have claimed three lives in this area.

Baffled for a week in their hunt for the person or persons who mailed six bombs, disguised as Easter gifts, from a mid-city post box last Thursday night, the investigators pressed their inquiry into the latest death in the possibility it may have some connection with the case.

TAX MAN TELLS HOW HE LOST ON RACES

dy of Lieutenant Edward J. McCarthy and Trooper Anthony Golden of the state police.

The was met by his wife and the two children.

EXPLAINS GIRL

That brought tears to Newell's eyes and he hastened to explain to reporters:

"They said they arrested me at the bedside of a girl in a hospital. Well, that is right, but that girl was only a friend. There wasn't any affair going on.

"I knew the police were on my trail and that they would take whatever money I had. I thought I might just as well use some of it to help this poor, sick girl. I know my wife understands."

Newell seemed to want to tell everything.

"I started playing the horses back in 1934," he explained. "I only played in small amounts then.

"I had a system.

ENCOUNTERED CROOKS

"It seemed like a good system then, because it was a winning system, but nothing is a good system when you're up against crooked persons. I found that out.

"However, I won time after time. I ran my winnings up to about $7500 at one time, and I thought:

"'Well, if I can keep this up and pile on a few more thousands I can clean up with the town shortage and have money left over. Then I'll get out and quit.'

"I had been keeping memoranda all this time of the loans I made from the town monies. Yes, I kept careful track of every penny.

"But it seemed that after I reached that $7,500 point, luck—if you call it luck—started to turn.

"It got pretty bad. It got so bad I just tore up the memoranda because I felt I wasn't going to be able to square up then. Finally I was desperate.

GLAD IT'S OVER

"When I found out about the auditors, I knew it was all over and I was glad.

"The day I left, I got some money from a bookie who owed me money and I boarded a plane in Boston for New York. In New York I got the train for Miami.

"That was April 4. I guess you know the rest of it. They arrested me in Miami a few days later. Now here I am."

Newell, according to police, had a habit of flying from one race track to another if he didn't think the day was favorable at his first choice of fields.

LEXINGTON
Plans Holiday
CELEBRATION

Commemorating the 161st anniversary of the battle of Lexington with services Sunday and military parades and exercises Monday, Lexington plans elaborate celebration of Patriots' Day.

At Cambridge a parade of the military will form at 9:15 a. m., Monday, at Lafayette square and the march will be followed by exercises in Harvard square at which Commander Francis J. O'Reilly of the Grand Army of the Republic will speak.

Mayor John D. Lynch will welcome the rider, "William Dawes," en route" "to alarm the Colonists as to the approach of the British."

Thereafter "Dawes" and "Paul Revere," enacted by members of the cavalry troop of the National Guard, will complete their rides from Boston to Lexington and "Dr. Prescott" will ride from that town on to Concord.

Utopia Seekers Deny Stranding

Havana, April 16 (AP)—Reports from Pinar Del Rio that the American schooner Fleetwood had run aground with its group seeking a Virgin Islands "Utopia," brought denials today from Maurice Allard, master of the Fleetwood, who was found in a small hotel here.

Allard, who appeared to have lost much weight, seemed to have lost immediate hope, however, of setting up a "heaven" in the Virgin Islands.

Horse Laugh

New York, April 16 (US)—Arrested for driving a horse and wagon while intoxicated, John Mulligan, driver for a towel delivery service, told Magistrate Oliver in Tombs court:

"It doesn't matter whether I am drinking or not as long as Jim, the horse, is on the job. Jim knows his way around, and never misses a traffic light."

Mulligan was sentenced to a day in jail and Jim, the traffic-wise horse, had a quiet horse laugh.

Horse 'System' Went Wrong

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Here is one more race-track gambler who had a "system" which went wrong. He is George H. Newell, Holden tax collector, as he appeared today at Worcester when charged with embezzlement of town funds allegedly totaling $20,000. He was arrested at Miami. In an exclusive interview he tells Boston Evening American readers how he used stolen money to play the horses, only to learn, too late, that he couldn't "beat"

2 Fitchburg Girls Hunted in Penn.

Fitchburg, April 16—Pennsylvania state police have been asked to intercept two Fitchburg high school girls believed en route through that state in quest of adventure.

They are Evelyn Murray, 15, of Overland stret, student in St. Bernard's high school, and Frances R. O'Donnell, 17, of Cottage street, who attends Leominster high school.

Officer McDonald Suffers Relapse

Patrolman Daniel J. McDonald, left at death's door in South Boston two years ago by gangsters who beat him with black-jacks, has suffered another relapse.

Brain injuries, from which he has never fully recovered, caused his removal to City Hospital after he collapsed in his home on Norton street, Dorchester. His condition was reported as again serious.

OPEN BATTLE ON BUDGET IN HOUSE

Republicans and Democrats in the House squared off today in battle as debate opened on Governor Curley's 1936 budget.

Republicans pledged in caucus to act in concert banded together in a verbal assault on what they described as the most extravagant budget ever submitted to the Legislature.

Principal item to draw the wrath of Republican members intent on pruning the budget by approximately $12,500,000 was a $9,000,000 bond issue for the erection of state hospitals.

A hint of the bitterness which may be expected to color the debate later in the day was contained in a statement by Speaker Leverett Saltonstall before the session opened.

"As in the past, pressure will be exerted," said the presiding officer of the House and candidate for the gubernatorial nomination on the Republican ticket.

"Threats will be made. Inducements will be offered. Villification and abuse may be resorted to. A smoke screen will hide the real purpose of the apostles of reckless spending."

Governor Curley devoted his weekly radio address to a refutation of a charge that he had spent six times more in the executive, contingent and extraordinary funds than his predecessor.

"There have been no unnecessary expenditures during my term and there is no justification for saying that my program has impaired the credit of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts," he said.

Mr. Saltonstall revealed that Republicans will hold out against a $5000 salary for the state's "ambassador to Washington" and $3500 "for the governor's representative at military and social functions."

"The governor asks $50,000 for his contingent fund which he uses for travel, flowers, cigars, signed photographs and recordings of his voice," Mr. Saltonstall said.

"The average spent for the last 11 years was only $11,000; it should impose no hardship on the governor if we make this item $15,000 instead of $50,000."

Girl Breaks Jail, Frees Sweetheart

Harrisonville, Mo., April 16 (AP)—Battering down a door in the Cass County jail, a 21-year-old girl freed herself and then released her brother-in-law and sweetheart, Perry E. Griffin, 24, a former minister.

The girl, Miss Madge Copeland, escaped from behind the bars last night after beating a hole in the wooden door of her own cell and then searched the sheriff's quarters until she found the jail keys.

DAVIS SECRETLY WED

Everett Official Groom 14 Months

A closely guarded secret for 14 months, the marriage of Lawrence H. Davis, young president of the Everett Common Council, to Miss Helen Louise Coffey, a Boston beautician living in Everett, was made known today.

They were married in February, 1935, at Nashua, N. H., by Rev. C. F. Moss, pastor of a church there, and have since been living at their respective homes. Mrs. Davis resides at 28 Chestnut street.

Davis was graduated from Everett High in 1931 and elected to the Common Council a month after obtaining his majority. He was a prize debater, president of the senior class and all scholastic halfback while in school.

Since his marriage he has continued to reside with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Davis, at 11 Upland road, Everett.

HOUSE PROBERS HALT WAR ON REPORTER

Washington, April 16 (US)—The House Committee on Military affairs has vacated its subpoena for Frank C. Waldrop, reporter for the Washington Herald, who had challenged the committee's right to make him disclose the sources of his news stories revealing the army surplus goods scandal.

Elisha Hanson, counsel for the reporter, informed of the committee's action said:

"The action taken sustains our position that the committee could not act as a court to try either its chairman or Mr. Waldrop, and that no legislative purpose was being served by its investigation."

ATTEMPTED INFLUENCE

A news story had been published in the Hearst newspapers under Waldrop's signature disclosing that Chairman John J. McSwain and the committee had attempted to influence the war department to sell surplus army goods to two men since indicted for conspiracy to defraud the government.

The two men, Robert J. Byers, adjutant of the Michigan Department, American Legion, and George S. Krieger, surplus goods dealer, are accused of having obtained the goods at half price on their promise to distribute them in charity without profit and of having conspired to sell them in ordinary commerce at profit to themselves.

BOARD NOT COURT

Waldrop appeared before the committee with Hanson in answer to a subpoena, and refused to testify. Hanson said:

"As Mr. Waldrop's counsel, I respectfully inform you that if it be your intention to quiz him on the material set forth in the article which appeared in the Washington Herald and other newspapers on April 3, I have advised him not to answer your questions.

"This committee is not a court and it can try neither Mr. Waldrop nor itself.

"Furthermore, I have so advised him because of threats made by your chairman that if articles referring to him and his activities were not ended, he would have the committee summon the newspaper reporter writing these articles to find out who had inspired him.

"I do not recognize the right of any congressional committee, however, to summon a newspaper reporter here to examine him upon facts concerning the committee's own activities where the record as in this case shows that the committee was not interested in legislation, but merely in persuading a Secretary of War to do something which the majority of the committee felt should be done."

In attempting to force Waldrop to recognize its jurisdiction, the committee asked such "smearing" questions as to how many terms he had served in the penitentiary, whether he wis dishonorably discharged from the army and whether he had ordinary intelligence.

'Eye Patch Bandit' Charge Holds Trio

Three Cambridge salesmen were held in $10,000 each for hearing Tuesday after they had pleaded not guilty today to charges of having participated in the $45 "eye-patch bandit" robbery in Somerville yesterday.

Judge Malcolm E. Sturtevant in Somerville court expressed great surprise when an attorney requested that two of the defendants be allowed to go on personal recognizance. He said:

"On charges of robbery while armed? I should say not!"

The prisoners are John J. Brennan, 36, and Fred Lamkin, Jr., 32, both of Sacramento street, and William T. Griffin, 34, of Meacham road, Cambridge. Brennan and Lamkin got bail. Fred Gagne, Davis square realtor, was the victim of the robbery.

Another Egyptian Tomb Discovered

Cario, Egypt, April 16 (AP)—Professor Selim Bay Hassan said today he had discovered his third intact ancient Egyptian tomb within the last three weeks.

The latest find was uncovered last night and may be entered within the next two days.

The two previous discoveries were those of the tomb of the high priest to King Menkaura, builder of the Third Pyramid, and of a princess believed to have been the daughter of Cheops, builder of the Second Pyramid.

Auto Victim Dies

Springfield, April 16 (AP)—Miss Minnie Fortune, who with her sister, Elizabeth, was struck by an automobile Sunday night, died today. Both were unconscious when picked up by William J. Blake of this city, whose car struck them.

Reduces 195 Pounds In 10 Days

Detroit, April 16 (INS)—Mrs. John Crawford has lost 195 pounds in the last 10 days, doctors at Harper Hospital reported today as they announced they won the fight to save her life.

Weighing 315 pounds when she was admitted to the hospital, Mrs. Crawford was suffering from a tumor which was causing acute heart trouble.

Doctors, instead of operating, ran a tube into the tumor and drained 20 gallons of fluid from it gradually. She now weighs her normal 120 pounds.

Mrs. Crawford's condition today was pronounced "extremely satisfactory" and she was expected to be able to return to her housework in 10 days.

Plea Believed

Indicating his belief Leo Horongy, Kingston, Pa., had used his knife in self-defense, Judge Daniel J. Gillen found the seaman not guilty on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon in Municipal Court.

Lord Decies' Daughter Weds

London, April 16 (AP)—The Honorable Moya Beresford, 22, daughter of Lord Decies and granddaughter of George Jay Gould, was married today to the Honorable Patrick Bellew, 30, brother of Lord Bellew.

The service was performed in Brompton Oratory.

The engagement of the couple was announced last November, but the marriage was delayed because of the serious illness in February of Lord Decies.

10 B. U. Students Join Honor Body

Ten honor students of Boston University's college of business administration were elected today to Beta Gamma Sigma, national honorary scholastic society.

Juniors chosen are Esther R. O'Brien, Boston; Alfred E. Wallen, Roslindale; Florence Chandler, Waltham, and Frank C. Phillips, Medford. The balance of the list is made up of seniors. They are, Donald A. Caswell, Lowell; George Juskalian, Fitchburg; James L. Ortner, Malden; Carl E. Peterson, Plainville, Conn.; Eugenia M. Abbott, Belmont, and Rollin R. Richard, Richmond.

ASKS CATHOLIC TEACHERS IN OWN SCHOOLS

New York, April 16 (US)—More Catholic teachers in Catholic colleges to offset the "social utilitarianism" of modern education, was the demand made by the Reverend William J. McGucken, regent of the school of education of St. Louis University.

Speaking at the 33rd annual meeting of the National Catholic Educational Association, Father McGusken characterized as "incredible arrogance" Professor John Dewey's statement that skepticism had become the mark of the educated mind.

RELIGION REMEDY

He said:

"Education as a science has been developed by non-Catholic thinkers. Most of the text books have been written by educators infected with naturalistic philosophy. Even some of the teachers in Catholic colleges are not untouched by this virus. Their training has been largely in secular institutions."

The remedy, Father McGucken said, is to make Catholic colleges and universities "more Catholic." He emphasized that religion, by which he did not mean theology, is a necessary part of the curriculum, adding:

"If religion be not included in the program of studies, you have not merely an incomplete education, you have a distorted and maimed education."

Musical education of the blind by means of the radio was advocated by Sister Mary Benigna, O. P., of the Catholic Institute for the Blind.

BLIND TEACHERS

Herself blind, Sister Benigna urged pastors to employ blind organists and singers in their churches, as is the case in foreign lands, notably France.

Mother Mary Chrysostom of Posemont College, Pa., spoke of the need for a science course to prepare Catholic women to combat the modern philosophy of evolution, birth control and sterilization.

Respighi, Italian Composer, Dying

Rome, April 16 (AP)—The noted Italian composer, Ottorino Respighi, 56, is dying from heart disease, his doctor announced today.

Ill from blood poisoning for many weeks, the composer lost consciousness Tuesday night. His wife was at his bedside.

ITALIANS NEAR ADDIS ABABA; DUCE DEFIES LEAGUE PEACE

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press

Rome, April 16—A flying column, composed of hundreds of trucks, flanked by tanks and watched over by airplanes, sped from Dessye toward Addis Ababa today, Italian press dispatches said.

The mechanized Fascist forces will reach Ethiopia's capital within three days, the Italian advices said.

At the same time, another column may move southeast and overtake Ras Nasibu's troops at Harar, second city of Ethiopia, from the rear.

Declaring the way was open into Shoa province, of which Addis Ababa is the capital, press reports pointed out that the 175-mile road from Dessye to Addis Ababa, although not ideal, was passable for trucks, even during the rainy season.

Reports that this distance could be covered in less than three days came while Italians at home unfurled victory flags in celebration of yesterday's occupation of Dessye, confident that their East African legions were on their way to completion of Ethiopian conquest.

COMPLETE CHANGE

The war, dispatches from Italian headquarters said, had changed completely from its previous aspects on the northern front.

The greatest difficulties once presented by the savage nature of the terrain and lack of communications were described now as a "memory of the past."

For the first time, Fascist reports said, it was possible now to go from the coast of the Red Sea to Addis Ababa by automobile.

Italian correspondents described 160 trucks loaded with cheering, rifle-waving soldiers passing through Dessye, escorted by tanks, on the way to Emperor Haile Selassie's capital.

Reports that Ethiopian Crown Prince Asfa Wosan left Dessye with 1000 men just before the Italians arrived revived Fascist rumors that the heir to Emperor Haile Selassie's throne had decided to go over the Italian side.

WOSAN AS PUPPET

This recalled conjectures made in Rome by many well-informed sources that the Italians would choose Asfa Wosan as a puppet ruler for Ethiopia after completing occupation of the country.

Rome military sources said it was probable Italian troops already would be in Addis Ababa by April 21, traditional birthday of Rome, celebrated widely in Italy with inauguration of new Fascist public works.

Celebrating the fall of Dessye, cheering throngs swarmed into the Piazza Venezia, ranging before the office of Premier Mussolini for a triumphant demonstration. Other crowds gathered in the Piazza Colonna.

WARNS FRANCE

This ancient capital of a Roman empire was draped in flags, as was the rest of the kingdom, at the orders of Il Duce.

Victory-flushed Fascists saw but a single cloud on their horizon—Great Britain, leader of the sanctions campaign.

Personal criticism against Anthony Eden, Britain's Foreign Secretary and League of Nations delegate, increased in the controlled Italian press, but Fascists declared their confidence that Italy would beat both the League's sanctions and Ethiopia's warriors.

A belief arose that Italian tension with Britain would be heightened shortly by the progressing Fascist campaign.

A well-informed source indicated that Italy had warned France against any further Geneva pressure.

Duce Defies League, Will Conduct Own Peace

Copyright, 1936, by Associated Press

Geneva, April 16—Italy was described by an authoritative source today as demanding the right to conduct direct negotiations with Ethiopia for peace, without any interference by the League of Nations.

According to this source, in intimate contact with the League, the Italian government demands that direct negotiations for the eventual establishment of a military armistice be conducted as between victor and vanquished.

Such an armistice, it was said, might be followed by a peace conference in some neutral point, such as Lausanne.

It was reported here that the Ethiopian delegation told the committee of 13 it is "absolutely impossible" to accept the preliminary peace terms offered by the Italians.

It was stated that Premier Mussolini asked that Italian security, in case he begins negotiations for an armistice, be guaranteed.

Italy was said to claim that her armies in Ethiopia might be harassed by armed Ethiopian bands over which Emperor Haile Selassie would have no control.

HAS NO ASSURANCE

The Italian attiture was described, in other words, as being that Italy could cease hostilities but that she had no assurance the Ethiopians would stop fighting.

Premier Mussolini's proposals were summarized as follows by a league authority:

1. A military armistice to be negotiated with Ethiopia directly between the general staffs of the Italian and Ethiopian armies.

2. A peace conference outside Geneva, preferably Lausanne.

3. Direct negotiations at this conference between Italy and Ethiopia with the league participating merely through observers who would report the results and keep the league informed.

4. Guarantees that during the armistice negotiations as well as during the projected peace conference, armed Ethiopian bands outside the control of Emperor Haile Selassie would not be able to harass the Italian armies with guerrilla warfare.

INSIDE STORY OF 5 MILLION BOND RACKET REVEALED

a U. S. commissioner on the charge of conspiring to violate the same law, in connection with the theft of $590,000 in bonds from the United States Trust Company in New York City, December 13, 1934.

FROM TELLER'S CAGE

These bonds disappeared from a teller's cage a few minutes after being delivered by messengers from the First of Boston Corporation, then a subsidiary of the First National Bank of Boston.

Suspicion naturally fell on associates of "Spilly" Evans, according to federal authorities. Evans is the reputed originator of the method of snatching bonds from bank tellers' cages with the aid of a cane with a wad of gum on the end.

The valuable securities are deftly "lifted" while the teller's attention is drawn away by a telephone call, made from outside the bank by one of the gang.

SIMILAR METHOD

This was the approximate method used in the United States Trust Company theft, but it took 16 months of patient investigation to reach a point where Evans could be arrested.

In the first place, he was not easily found. In the language of the federal sleuths, he is the most notorious "lamster" in this country.

Evans walked out of the courthouse at Brockton in 1929 at a time when a dozen police departments were impatiently waiting for a chance to question him.

Since that time, the Boston Evening American learned today, he has successfully slipped out of New York and Chicago, as the trail got too hot, and then jumped "straw" bail in St. Louis, after the law had caught up with him.

BONDS RECOVERED

According to Chief Agent Hoover, $310,000 of the stolen United States Trust Company bonds have been recovered. One hundred thousand dollars was allegedly found on Hartman when he was arrested, Hoover said, and a $10,000 bond was allegedly found in the lining of Smith's hat when he was taken into custody at Topeka. Another $100,000 bond was said to have been found in possession of the DeGrassis.

The stolen certificates, five for $100,000 each and nine for $10,000 each, were U. S. Treasury notes, and the bank had the serial numbers.

Evans' record covers a period of 29 years, according to authorities.

The government thought his career was ended in September, 1929, when he was arrested with two other men at Plymouth, where $200 had been extracted from a bank teller's cage.

IDENTIFIES PRINTS

He gave his name as William Roberts, but Inspector Warren Liese of the Boston police department identified his fingerprints.

Police said he was the outside, or telephone, man in the Plymouth case.

Plymouth police were greatly surprised to find they had arrested a man for whom Department of Justice agents had searched all over America.

The Federal men wanted him, two other men and a woman as well, for stealing from the Riggs National Bank of Washington, where $15,000 vanished in February, 1929.

From Quincy and other places, police went to Plymouth with witnesses who were to try to pick out Evans from a police lineup. He defied them, telling the officers it was illegal, and he bluffed successfully. He treated them with high disdain when they suggested he shave off his mustache so that one girl witness could see if he had a scar on his upper lip.

VISITED BANKS

In various cities, police had a description approximately fitting Evans as a man who had visited banks several times before sneak thefts occurred. The police theory was that these visits were to obtain the names of the tellers so they could be called on the telephone.

Springfield wanted to try to connect him with a $10,000 theft, and Cambridge with a theft from a bank in Harvard square.

After a month of maneuvering against the various police strategists and extradition moves in Washington, Evans was taken to superior court at Brockton on October 30 for trial in the Plymouth case, with William Boyd, alias Merriam, and George W. Clark.

TRIO DISAPPEARS

For two hours the men sat in the courthouse while Attorney James F. Fahey argued with District Attorney Winfield Wilbar for a postponement. Vahey lost and trial was ordered to start in five minutes before Judge Broadhurst. Evans and his two companions were still there at the beginning of this five-minute intermission, but at its end they were gone.

Police theorized that Evans decided not to stand trial because he noticed, about the courthouse, a private detective who had caused his arrest some time previously for a $75,000 bank theft in the West. But Evans' career is profusely marked with disappearances before the time came to stand trial.

Another feature of his career is that he has never been linked by police with any robbery in which violence occurred.

AS COLLATERAL

While Evans was keeping out of sight in New York, after the Brockton episode, government agents kept doggedly probing bond disappearances and discovered, after many months, what appeared to be one reason for the easy disposal of stolen securities.

Irresponsible brokers were using stolen bonds and other securities as collateral for personal loans and stock-market margin accounts.

The depression had made the supplying of stolen bonds and stock certificates a leading feature of the bond-theft racket.

A $10,000 bond being used as collateral in this manner eventually fell into the hands of the authorities and the gang moved out of New York into Chicago. They operated in that territory until last spring, it was learned, without a single arrest.

GROUP SPLITS

When an alarm went out for the arrest for sale of stolen securities of three of the group now held in custody, the group split, some of them moving into St. Louis.

In the same city, government agents shortly afterward caught up with the much-sought-for "Spilly" Evans and a companion named Heller, who was wanted almost as much as the Boston man. Evans was held in $10,000. He provided the bail and disappeared. The bail turned out to be so much "straw."

That was in October, 1934. Last June, Smith was picked up in Topeka with one of the bonds which he had brought from Kansas City. Then the most intensive search ever carried on for "Spilly" Evans and his associates was begun. The search extended to every city between Seattle and Miami, and between Portland, Me., and San Diego, Cal. Agents even went to the Bahama Islands.

In January of this year, information was obtained of another attempt to dispose of one of the bonds. Hartman's trail was picked up. One by one the various members of the group were "spotted," followed and finally arrested.

OTHERS BROUGHT HERE

Late last week, Evans, Crowley, Marosi and Palmer were found in New York, and Alexander in Washington, D. C. They were held incommunicado in New York from last Saturday until today and the others, except Smith, were brought there to join them.

The Boston Evening American learned exclusively yesterday that the group was being held and published the story, but names could not be used, inasmuch as the chief of the New York division of the Department of Justice refused to make any official statement, or to confirm or deny the story.

The story spread to New York and Washington and, eventually, drew the official announcement from J. Edgar Hoover.

MYSTERY ROBBERY

The $590,000 theft was one of the most daring bank robberies in years and was completely surrounded in mystery which government agents now admit is only partially solved.

Two members from the First Boston Corporation, Broadway, New York, carried the consignment of bonds to the securities department of the United States Trust Company to be exchanged for other bonds.

A clerk in the securities department stacked them on a desk in his cage, about two feet from the window, and left to make up the package of bonds for exchange in a vault.

When he returned to the cage a few minutes later the bonds had disappeared with no indication of the manner in which they had vanished.

Even today, despite the arrests, federal officials admit they have not yet determined the manner in which the bonds were obtained by the thieves.

HURT IN RAID, ASKS $10,000

In an unusual civil action, Officer Arthur W. Kelley of the Somerville police today sought $10,000 for injuries he claims he received during a liquor raid on a Summer street, Somerville, house.

Osman B. Gilman of Cambridge, owner of the property, is defendant.

The officer alleges that he was injured, May 6, 1932, when he fell through a hole in the floor of the third story to the floor below.

The hearing opened today before Judge Frank J. Donahue and a jury in Middlesex civil court.

Timothy L. Sullivan, a brother officer, testified that he was one of the raiding party with Kelley, and saw him fall.

He said they were searching in darkness, save for the beams of their flashlights, and were walking across the third floor when suddenly Kelley dropped through.

Sullivan testified a detachable cardboard had been placed over the hole.

In denying the charge, Gilman alleged that if the officer was injured, it was through his own negligence.

Needham Youth Appeals Auto Fine

Elliott C. Butler, 18-year-old son of socially prominent Mrs. Leslie B. Cutler of Needham, today appealed $100 fine when he was found guilty of negligent driving by Judge E. Dwight Fullerton in Dedham district court.

An automobile driven by Cutler figured in a crash, police say, which resulted in injuries to Miss Nancy Ware, 17-year-old Westwood debutante. Miss Ware is still confined in a hospital.

Champ Dad

Brooksville, Fla., April 16 (AP)—Ambrose H. Douglas, 91-year-old Negro, is the father of 37 children, and his wife is an expectant mother.

Twice married, Douglas' offspring by his first wife, numbered 20 boys and 5 girls, all but two now living. A widower at 72, he married his present wife, Minnie, in 1917, and there have been 12 children, 11 of them living.

He was born in slavery at Lillington, N. C., in 1845.

Brown Grid Star, McDonough, Weds

Manchester, N. H., April 16—Joseph McDonough, member of Brown University's famous "Iron Men" football team and now coach at Manchester Central high, was married today to Miss Judith Flynn, daughter of Mrs. Mina Flynn. The ceremony was performed at St. Joseph's Cathedral before a throng.

The bride is a member of one of the city's most prominent families. McDonough comes from a famous "football family." He has a brother, Huby McDonough, one-time noted halfback at Dartmouth.

Square Deal Grocers to Meet

A general meeting of the "Square Deal Grocers Association" will be held on Sunday April 19, at 2 p. m. in Putman Hall at 1165 Tremont Street, Roxbury.

The newly found organization has about 200 members and the goal is to reach 2000 by January 1937 in Greater Boston.

All groceries and variety store keepers are eligible to membership. The temporary officers are I. M. Alpert, president, M. Nidel, vice president, R. Nordon, treasurer, Joseph Strowman, financial secretary, and M. Carr, recording secretary.

Still at It

San Jose, Calif., April 16 (AP)—Rancher J. V. Gallardi called on the sheriff's office to find the man who had shot holes in his wooden water tank.

Two deputies inspected the holes, glanced to a nearby tree and found the culprit still at his mischief—a woodpecker.

HOW TO USE THIS NEW RENTAL MAP

1st—Note the key letter and number that is at the end of the ad.

2nd—Find the letter in the alphabet that corresponds with the ad on the side of the map. Now you know that vacancy is located somewhere along a line parallel with that letter.

3rd—Then look for the numeral that corresponds with the ad at the top of the map. The vacancy you want is located nearest a point where a line from the numeral meets a line from the letter.

Landon State Drive Hums

Senate President Backs Kansan

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

President James G. Moran of the Massachusetts Senate has joined the Landon for President movement.

In a letter to Edwin F. Parker, president of the Landon for President Club of Massachusetts, President Moran said in part:

"I can definitely state I am in accord with your movement 100 per cent."

James G. Moran

Out of the total of 21 senators, 13 are now out-and-out Landon supporters. Of the remaining eight, seven are favorable to the Kansas Governor's candidacy and are expected to declare themselves within a short time.

Senator William A Davenport of Greenfield, it is understood, is an admirer of Senator William Borah.

Approximately 60 Republican members of the House are also members of the Landon Club and a number of others loom up as eventual joiners.

EARS CLOSE TO GROUND

Elected as they are from every section of the state, and with ears close to the ground for home sentiment, their action in coming out for Landon reveals the tremendous appeal that the Kansan's record and character has to the rank and file of the party.

Many of the outstanding Republican leaders are convinced that Governor Landon will be the almost unanimous choice of the party voters in the April 28 primary.

The opportunity of writing in the name of Governor Landon is given the voters under a special law enacted by the present legislature.

From every New England state, applications are coming to the Landon Club headquarters, room 308, Parker House, Boston.

While the club was organized as a rallying point for Republican, Independents and for Democrats who are opposed to the Raw Deal, in Massachusetts, membership in the club to other New Englanders is being granted.

MOVEMENT HUMS

Through the medium of volunteer workers, women's and men's Republican clubs, and especially the Young Republican organizations, the Landon movement is humming in every section. Landon speakers are in constant demand for these meetings.

Plans are afoot for the first big open meeting in the interest of Governor Landon's candidacy, with Lorimer Hall in Tremont Temple tentatively selected.

Prominent speakers from within and without the state will be on the platform. Among those invited are Miss Nettie Burleigh, delegate to the Republican national convention from Maine, a Landon supporter; William Allen White, publisher of the Emporia Gazette, and State Senator Carter of New Hampshire.

Tonight President Parker of the club will address the Medford Men's Republican Club in that city, while other speakers will attend an open Landon meeting in Westfield sponsored by Senator and Mrs. Harry G. Putnam of Westfield.

Landon Name Written On Nebraska Ballots

Lincoln, Neb., April 16 (INS)—The huge "write-in" vote for Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas in the presidential preference, and the apparent victory of former Congressman Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff, a Townsend plan advocate, in the race for the Democratic U. S. Senatorial nomination marked Nebraska's primary balloting today with returns still trickling in from outlying precincts.

With some 236 of the state's 2025 precincts unreported, the Cornhusker State had given 62,240 votes to Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, the only candidate to have his name on the presidential preference ballot, and had written in 12,472 votes for Governor Landon.

Carpenter clung with tenacity to a slim majority of less than 4000 over J. C. Quigley of Valentine, chairman of the Democratic state committee, with returns from 1755 precincts tabulated, and was virtually conceded victory.

Borah Sweeps Vote In Downstate Illinois

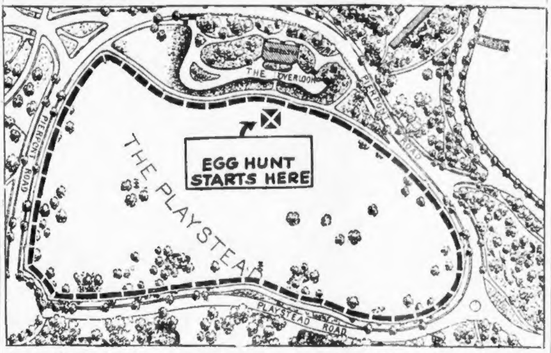
Chicago, April 16 (INS)—Illinois' delegation of 57 delegates to the Republican National Convention at Cleveland will be divided, 31 for Colonel Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, and 26 for Senator William E. Borah, it was evident today.

With more than one-third of the 3750 precincts outside Cook County still unreported, Borah apparently was walking away with 13 downstate congressional districts.

The incomplete downstate returns gave the Idaho Senator a projected plurality of 44,800 in the Presidential preference voting.

Knox carried Cook County by 110,294 and has a projected statewide majority of about 65,000.

Where Thousands Will Seek Prizes



Here is The Playstead in Franklin Park, where unique hunt for 1000 eggs will occur Saturday, at 10 a. m. Thousands of boys and girls will join in the hunt.

Curley, Farley to Launch State Campaign Tonight

The Democratic national and state campaign in Massachusetts will be launched tonight in Pittsfield with Postmaster James A. Farley and Governor James M. Curley delivering the keynote speeches.

Outside of a convention, it will be the biggest gathering of Democrats in the western part of the state in many years.

Seats for 682 persons have been sold for the dinner in the Hotel Wendell. This is the capacity of the dining room.

Approximately 400 more are expected to crowd in when the speaking starts, which will go out over the air.

District Attorney Thomas F. Moriarty of Springfield will introduce the speakers, including Chairman Joseph McGrath of the Democratic state committee.

The dinner is under the auspices of the four western counties with Michael Troy of West Stockbridge, president of the Berkshire County League, in charge of arrangements.

The toastmaster will be John M. Deely of Lee.

Prior to the dinner, Postmaster-General Farley will be given a reception by more than 100 postmasters from various parts of the state and another reception will afterwards be tendered by the delegates to the national and state convention and members of state western cities and town committees.

Recruits of '36 Quiz Candidates On Raw Deal

Candidates for 'state office as well as those seeking election as delegates to the Democratic and Republican national conventions are being asked to state their attitude on a number of questions affecting government in a letter sent out today by the "Recruits of '36."

This organization is headed by Ernest P. Dennett as chairman. In the space of a few months the "Recruits of '36" have placed in distribution more than 60,000 of its distinctive red-white-blue buttons on coat lapels.

The announced purpose of the organization is to re-establish American methods of government.

Here are the two questions that the candidates are requested to answer:

1—Do you believe in the principles of the Recruits of '36, which are as follows: "Give us back American methods of government. Oppose government by federal bureaus and stop the regimentation of our people. Oppose the government raising the cost of living?"

2—If your answer is "yes" and you are elected, will you use your best efforts to carry out the above principles?

Replies of candidates are requested to be returned before April 22 and will be made public.

The "Recruits of '36" will take up headquarters this week on the ground floor at 94 Federal street. Officers of the Recruits, in addition to Chairman Bennett of Worcester, include James F. Fitzgerald of Milton as vice-chairman, Donald P. Perry of Newton as treasurer and W. S. Griscom of Cambridge as secretary.

Thousands in X-9 Egg Hunt

Only tomorrow remains before the rain-delayed Boston Evening American Secret Agent X-9 Club Egg Hunt gets under way at The Playstead in Franklin Park at 10 a. m. on Saturday.

Biggest day of the year for the thousands of boy and girl members in this unique New England organization—let all you young Secret Agents hope for good weather on Saturday.

Rather than hindering the club, however, the delay advanced it, with thousands of new boy and girl members joining and with the total membership now well over the 100,000 mark.

Scheduled to be held last Saturday morning, rain and cold weather forced the Chief to put the annual event over a week rather than risk the health of his constituents.

Evidently hundreds of youngsters who would have been ineligible last Saturday are thankful for they're since joined the Secret Agent X-9 Club.

There is still time to join before the big search for the 1000 eggs gets underway. Apply to Secret Agent X-9 at 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, and you'll receive your shiny Secret Agent X-9 badge and identification card.

Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield, Governor James M. Curley, Police Commissioner Eugene McSweeney, Fred Waring, noted orchestra leader, Wally Berger, of the Bees, are just a few of those who'll be present when the Easter Egg Hunt gets started.

The finder of the gold egg will carry off the first prize of $15. The young sleuth tracking down the silver egg will be rewarded with $10.

BALKY WITNESS STIRS LOBBY BOARD IRE

Washington, April 16 (INS)—The Senate lobby committee, after a somewhat tumultous hour, today scheduled a closed meeting to consider contempt proceedings against a witness who refused to answer questions.

The committee chairm, Senator Black (D.) of Alabama, said the meeting would be held later in the day.

Kurt Grunwald, a naturalized American of Russian birth, one of the founders of the anti-administration Farmers' Independence Council, refused to tell names of persons in Nebraska and South Dakota whom he contacted and won to sympathy with his organization.

PLENTY OF TROUBLE 6

Grunald said he wouldn't tell the names because he didn't want to get anyone in trouble.

"Do you think you would get these people in trouble?" asked Black.

"You bet your obots," said Grunwald. "Under this New Deal, they'd get into plenty of trouble. I'd be a damn fool to tell those names."

"Well," observed Black, "you understand the subpoena under which you are testifying?"

"I do."

Just after this, Senator Minton (D.) of Indiana asked Grunwald when he was naturalized.

"I expect that," replied the witness. "I am foreign born, and we foreign born sometimes have to go through hell from you 100 per cent Americans. I remember the war days, when I was persecuted because of my German name."

TO MAKE HOME

"And you don't like this country?"

"I do. I came here to make my home."

"And you never made any efforts to go back to the other country?"

"No. Why should I? But I don't forget those things. I was persecuted."

Afterwards Black announced that the committee would go over the record at a closed meeting later in day. Senator Schwellenbach said that the matter of contempt proceedings would be "under consideration.

Carroll Asks New Dog Racing Action

Senator Edward C. Carroll plans to move today for reconsideration of the Senate vote, passing to be engrossed the bill to repeal the special referendum on dog racing at the November election.

Passage of the bill would prevent voting on horse and dog racing until 1938.

Two Rivals Erased?

Borah Well Pleased At Illinois Split

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Washington, April 16 (US)—Senator William E. Borah declared he was "highly pleased" by the "excellent showing" he made against the Republican machine and campaign fund arrayed against him in the Illinois primaries. He said:

"Knox won Chicago, but I won Illinois."

That made it unanimous.

Colonel Frank Knox, at Chicago, claimed it a great victory. He appeared to have won the eight delegates at large by a statewide majority of about 80,000, but with Borah apparently winning at least 26 of the 49 district delegates, it appeared he would secure almost half of Illinois' 57 delegates.

Are Unpledged

Borah won most of the delegates in the southern agricultural areas. How many, he will never know until the roll is called at Cleveland. Under the Illinois primary law they are unpledged.

Their Republican adherents were unable to derive the satisfaction claimed by the contenders for the presidency.

Knox was unable to win an overwhelming verdict in the state which he calls "home," in which he claims to be the "favorite son" and with the backing of the powerful Republican organization.

Borah was unable to attain a victory in Cook county despite his national prestige, but surprised political observers by his strength down state.

Among shrewd political strategists were here, this observation was current:

"They possibly have erased each other."

In Nebraska

Borah won the preferential vote in Nebraska. No other candidate's name was on the ballot. The delegates elected there are for Governor Landon. In some of the precincts as many voters wrote his name onto the ballot as marked their crosses opposite the name of the Idaho Senator.

Borah will go forward with his campaign in Ohio and other states where he has formally entered as a candidate. He has said from the start that no matter the result to his personal ambition, he is intent upon exercising an influence in the drafting of a proper platform by the national convention and the selection of a liberal candidate for the presidency.

Former Congressman Carl G. Bachmann, the senator's national campaign manager, said of the Illinois result:

"Borah had to run against the Republican organiza'ion and against a large expenditure of money to defeat him."

30 Delegates

Knox is assumed to have collected about 30 delegates out of Illinois. He had eleven in New Hampshire. Ex-Senator George H. Moses asserted there are 100 others now for Knox if unidentified.

Despite these claims, there was a prevailing belief in Washington that Landon will have more than 300 delegates on the first ballot and enough to insure his nomination on the second ballot.

The extraordinary victory of Governor Henry Horner, Democratic candidate for renomination, surprised Washington if it did not not gratify the New Deal.

Horner was opposed by the Democratic Cook county machine of Mayor Edward J. Kelly and National committeeman Patrick A. Nash.

Postmaster-General Farley refused to give him any support and indicated that his preference was lodged with Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, the Kelly-Nash machine-backed aspirant.

VICKS VAPORUB

Knox Declared Weaker After Illinois Voting

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

Washington, April 16 (INS)—Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, lone-handed crusader for the Republican presidential nomination, came out of the Illinois primary no nearer the nomination, but with considerably enhanced prestige.

This was the opinion of political observers in Washington today as they scanned belated returns from downstate Illinois districts which showed the Idaho senator winning from Col. Frank Knox, the Chicago publisher, with whom, apparently, he will divide the state's 57 delegates to the Cleveland convention.

Before the primary, Republican leaders privately asserted that if Borah won 20 delegates in Illinois it would be a distinct feather in his cap. They based this on the fact that Knox was running as a favorite son, with the support of the state organization, and with the endorsement of virtually every prominent Republican in the state.

CAMPAIGNED STATE

Moreover, the colonel had campaigned the state for almost a year. Borah had no such factors in his favor. He was without any organization to speak of, had little or no money, and was able to spend only four days in the state. Yet late returns show he carried 13 of the state's 25 congressional districts, and if the Cleveland delegates adhere to the advisory vote he will have 26 votes in the convention. Knox will have 31.

Considering all the circumstances, the senator's friends contended today that the outcome in Illinois constituted a Borah victory, despite the 31 delegates accredited to Colonel Knox.

The senator himself inclined to this view today.

"Colonel Knox carried Chicago, but I carried Illinois," was the way he put it.

VOTE NOT BINDING

The Illinois vote is not binding upon the delegates to the Cleveland convention, being purely advisory. The delegates can — and probably will—respect the advisory vote on the first ballot and then leap for the nearest bandwagon, which at the moment appears to be driven by Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas.

The Kansas governor now is credited with a first ballot strength in excess of 300 votes, and more secondary support than all of his rivals put together. He has refrained from entering primary contests, and refrained from any speaking tours. As a result he has made no enemies and aroused no militant opposition.

The outcome in Illinois, in the opinion of Republican leaders in Washington, all but eliminates Colonel Knox as a live possibility at Cleveland.

Farley Re-Elected New York Leader

Albany, N. Y., April 16 (INS)—The Democratic state committee today chose Postmaster General James A. Farley for another two-year term as state chairman, and placed other supporters of President Roosevelt in the remaining key offices.

Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn, Bronx leader and original Roosevelt man among the New York city Democratic chieftains, was selected to succeed the late John H. McCooey of Kings as national committeeman, while Representative Caroline P. O'Day of Westchester was named to replace the late Miss Elisabeth Marberry on the national committee.

Aged Man Perishes

Harbor Grace, N. F., April 16 (AP)—Lemuel Peddle, 76, burned to death when fire destroyed his home in Bristol Hope Village, near here, today.

Speed Cop-Mayor Nabs Bus Driver

Stamford, Conn., April 16 (AP)—Mayor Alfred N. Phillips, Jr., of this city, turned policeman last night, chased a New England transportation company bus nearly a mile and charged its driver with violating the rules of the road.

Mayor Phillips said the bus cut in on his automobile.

The mayor pursued the vehicle and ordered the driver to accompany him to police headquarters where he was given a summons.

Deal Tip

Chicago, April 16 (US)—Senator Lester J. Dickinson of Iowa, Republican presidential aspirant, speaking before the Paul Revere Veterans Association here, suggested this motto for the "New Dealers":

"Blessed are the young, for they shall inherit the national debt."

Senator Dickinson warned that spending was chronic with the Roosevelt administration and would continue until the New Dealers were turned out.

Pottery Enthusiasts Will Open Exhibit With Tea

By BETTY ALDEN

THOUGH ART EXHIBITS are a great pleasure, they are no novelty in our social world . . . but exhibits of little pottery gadgets made by some of our most aristocratic citizens themselves, are few and far between, and so a great deal of interest is being shown in the private view and tea to be held next Tuesday, April 21, at the Pottery Workshop, 6 Byron street . . .

Among the members of the Pottery Workshop, which is a little society devoted to the advancement of the potters' art, whose names appear on the invitations to this novel occasion are Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Mrs. Reginald W. Bird, Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Miss Elsie Dalton, Mrs. Edwin S. Dodge, Mrs. Louis A. Frothingham, Mrs. Henry Lyman, Mrs. Wayland Manning, Miss Frances Nickerson, Mrs. John D. Phillips, Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson, Mrs. Thomas C. Thacher, Jr., Mrs. W. A. Whitcomb, Mrs. G. W. Treadwell, Mrs. Robert Stone, Mrs. F. O. Agnew, Mr. N. E. Arsenault, Miss Louise Baldwin, Mrs. H. M. Cleveland, Mrs. E. B. Hoagland, and Mrs. Frederick Parker . . .

POLLY WINSLOW

Members of the Parent's League are asked to R. S. V. P. to Mrs. James Bourne Ayer if they plan to stay for tea after the address by Richard Gummere, chairman of the board of admissions at Harvard, who has been engaged as the guest speaker for the Parent's League's annual meeting on Monday afternoon, April 27 at the Chilton Club . . .

The subject under discussion at this meeting will be "From School to College, With Special Reference to Progressive Schools" . . .

Polly Winslow, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Winslow of Clarendon street, gave a small luncheon today . . . It was to have been a farewell party for Mrs. Hugh O'Neil Hencken who sails this week-end with Mr. Hencken to spend the summer in Europe . . . but due to unforeseen developments, Mr. and Mrs. Hencken left for New York this morning, a day earlier than they had planned, so the guest of honor had to offer her regrets at the last minute . . .

Mr. Hencken has had a busy week, having been best man at an Easter Monday wedding in New York when his friend, Frederick St. George-Smith of Greenwich, Ct., was married to the former Miss Catherine Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Allen of New York . . .

Many Dinners Will Precede Ball

IT BEGINS TO LOOK as if the only people who will dine in their own homes Friday evening are the hostesses who are giving dinner parties before the Modern Arts Ball at the Copley-Plaza. . .

As the ball is something new and novel for Boston, everyone is keenly anticipating it and, as usual before a large dance, there is to be a great deal of entertaining . . . the Frederick B. Robinsons (Ethel Grew) are giving a party at their Cambridge home for Mr. and Mrs. Ernest B. Dane, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Robert Faxon, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Batchelder, Caroline Hovey and John Grandin, Jr. . . .

Since the Modern Arts Ball is sponsored by the Museum of Modern Art, most of Boston's artists and painters are especially interested in its success . . . Our most famous portraitist, John Lavalle, and Mrs. Lavalle have been invited to dine with Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Nickerson (Laetitia Orlandini) at their Brookline residence . . . Their fellow guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Richard Almy, the Willis P. Beals and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gwin, Jr.

Two engaged couples will be included among Greta Erikson's guests at the dinner her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jackson Holmes of Beacon street, are giving for her . . . Unfortunately, Greta's fiance, Bill Davis of Baltimore, wasn't able to prolong his Easter visit long enough to take in this party . . . Her guests will be Mabel Bell and Bill Read, Jean Read and Whitney Stoddard, Mr. and Mrs. James K. Page, and Charles O. Beaman . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson W. Aldrich, Mr. and Mrs. C. Tracy Barnes and Miss Frances Gardiner are joining forces in giving a dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Freddie Church, Jr., the Charles Codmans, Anne Warren, Charles Woodard, Bradford Trafford, Mrs. John Suydam, Guy Lee, George Brewster, Paul Ceresole, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Iselin (Sally Curtis) of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Davis, Jr. (Nancy Whitman) Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Boyden, Nathalie Folsom, Abigail Sard, Anne Tuckerman, Miss Gardiner's fiance, Marc Peter, Brindely Hall, Philip Weld, Francis Richardson, William Congdon, John Lawrence, Robert Lassiter, George Homans and R. C. Coburn, Jr. . . .

Dinner Party at Forbes Home

ABOUT A DOZEN young people will drink a toast to the success of the ball as guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Bowers, 2d, who are giving a preliminary dinner at the home of Mrs. Bowers' mother, Mrs. Edward W. Forbes of Gerry's Landing . . . At this party place cards will bear the names of Laura Dodge, Barbara Warner, Bill McKennan, George Allen, William H. Forbes, Mrs. Eric Schroeder, David C. Forbes, Stephen Stackpole, Elsie Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Ward I. Gregg, Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Paine, Jr., Alwin M. Pappenheimer, J. Allen Dana, Jr., and John M. Forbes . . .

Marjorie Richardson and Raoul Pantaleoni will dine with a group of their young married friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Mumford, Jr. . . . other guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Child, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Eliot, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Crocker . . . The Junior Gordon Abbotts have invited Tim and Kitty Clark, the John S. Blyths, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Davis Crowninshield, Mr. and Mrs. William Davis Taylor and Henry Putnam to dine with them . . .

William G. Nickerson and John Howland will be hosts together to Elizabeth Hamlin, Adele Ryan of New York, Mrs. Barbara Young Hamlen, Mrs. James Hooper, Mr. and Mrs. Constantine Hutchins, Mr. and Mrs. March Wheelwright, Robert Livermore, Jr., and others . . .

MISS CORNELIA A. LEARY

Engaged to Chestnut Hill Man

MRS. JAMES B. KERR of Fall River announces the engagement of her daughter, Bertha, to Ronald G. Ballantyne of Melbourne, Australia. Miss Kerr is a graduate of the Lincoln school in Providence and is a member of the Junior League of Fall River. Mrs. Kerr and her daughter are spending the spring months vacationing in La Jolla, California, and will return East in June.

Louis J. O'Malley To Wed Ohio Girl

Of Boston interest was the brilliant reception, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Leary of Cincinnati, Ohio, had at their home recently to announce the engagement of their daughter, Cornelia A., to Louis J. O'Malley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. O'Malley of Chestnut Hill and Cohasset.

Miss Leary, who is interested in many social and philanthropic activities in the Ohio city, was graduated from the Summit Country Day School and the Law University of Cincinnati. She is a member of the Ohio Bar and American Bar Association.

Elective offices which Miss Leary holds, include the vice-presidency on the Phi Delta Delta and the International Legal Women's Legal Fraternity. She is also chairman of the Sunset Alumnae affairs.

Mr. O'Malley is a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Boston College. He is a member of the senior class of Boston College Law School. Mr. O'Malley is well-known in athletic circles and recently represented Massachusetts Institute of Technology at the inter-collegiate tournament in Philadelphia.

Plans are being made for a fall wedding.

Other sponsors who are planning to attend the dinner are former Governor Frank G. Allen and Judge Emma Fall Schofield.

Philomatheia Fashion Show at Bridge

NOW THAT mamma and older sister have had their day in the fashion show limelight . . . the junior set is being pressed into service to show the last word in summer organdies, soft silks and pastel net.

Such was the style parade at the Philomatheia bridge yesterday at the Copley-Plaza. The young set performed beautifully much to the amusement of doting mammas and fond sisters who attended in good numbers for the scholarship fund's benefit.

Mrs. Vincent P. Roberts of Chestnut Hill, president of the club, hovered about the door, anxious to greet every new arrival. Her soft blue wool gown was edged with white and her large brimmed hat was trimmed with angora of the same tone.

Blue Crepe

Mrs. Charles Stack and Mrs. Mary O'Leary Finucane took charge of the food table . . . both attractively dressed in navy blue crepe. Bridge prizes were in charge of Mrs. James W. Carr, chic in peacock green crepe and a stitched beret of black crepe and Mrs. James McDonough, whose navy frock was yolked in matching lace.

As usual, Mrs. Daniel Holland directed a corps of chance-sellers. Attractive members of the junior set doing their share were Marjorie Sullivan, Peggy Macken, Eileen Holland and Pauline Keefe.

Mrs. G. Frank Sullivan was smartly gowned in a gray suit with violet accessories, and Mrs. Joseph Kirby chose pale blue crepe.

The door committee served as an impromptu reception line. Mrs. William J. Bannon chose pink vestee as a contrast for her navy suit and matching flowers trimmed her large sailor . . . Mrs. Charles Hall's dark frock was trimmed with colorful print and Mrs. John J. Williams was gay in vari-colored flowered crepe.

Colorful Print

Old stand-bys in the club's activities were there . . . Josephine Hartigan in an ankle length gown of colorful print and Elizabeth Norton, who wore a corsage of jonquils with her blue print frock.

Mrs. Edmond L. Grimes attended the affair with Mrs. Michael Lyons and Mrs. John Moore and Mrs. Cornelius Spillane wore yellow accessories with brown tailleur. Accompanying her was Rose Quinn who leaves for a three-month visit in Cincinnati, where she will be house guest of Mrs. Charles Mesch.

Others enjoying an afternoon of bridge were Mrs. Henry S. Fitzgerald in a two-piece gown of navy and print, Mrs. Gerald Coyne and Mrs. Winthrop Hammond who wore a two-piece suit of henna knit and Mrs. Downey wearing a large straw hat with her printed frock.

There is no profession which Boston's young set doesn't enter. One of the most delightful radio programs was the musicale Mary Frances Murphy and Helen McCarthy Brown presented yesterday over WCOP.

Mrs. Brown entertained with a group of solos and Mary Frances played her accompaniments. Mary Frances, the daughter of Mrs. Edward Murphy of Marlboro, is active in affairs of Emmanuel College alumnae and Junior Philomatheia club.

Emmanuel Lecture

One of the most important lectures of the season will be given by Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, D. D., in Emmanuel College auditorium on April 26. Massachusetts Chapter of Notre Dame Federation is sponsoring the talk, "The Church and Our Times."

Sarah Lydon, president of the chapter, will preside and the officers serving as a reception committee are Anna Butler, Margaret Murray, Julia Fallon, Marietta O'Donnell, M. Antonia McInnis and Mrs. Marguerite Maguire, co-chairmen. Grace M. Kelly is chairman of publicity.

'Pixilated' Test Judges on Job

Judges in the Boston American "Pixilated" Contest were busy today appraising entries in the unique contest which centers about the question: "What do YOU do to help you think?"

It's going to take an entire day of careful selection on the part of the judges to determine the best answers—and we believe it's going to be very close running, for those last minute entries were a big surprise.

Winners of $25 cash prizes and theater tickets will be announced Saturday

The ticket winners will be guests of either Loew's State or Orpheum theaters.

There they will see Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," the picture which inspired the "Pixilated" Contest.

As the hero of the picture, Gary is described as being "pixilated," when he blows a tuba to help him think.

Ralph Adams Cram Gives Last of Lectures

RALPH ADAMS CRAM, prominent Boston socialite architect, gave last evening the last lecture in a series of five which have been held at the Boston Architectural Club.

Though Mr. Cram is an architect who was speaking in an architectural club for the purpose of raising money to assist in the education of young architects, his lecture was not a highly technical discussion of cornices and scrolls, but rather an interesting story of his experiences and impressions in what he calls "the most picturesque village in the world."

His many friends in the audience were greatly interested, for other Bostonians have found this little Mexican village, called Tascco, much to their liking as a vacation spot.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Abbott occupy a villa there, and many of Mr. Abbott's photographs were used to illustrate the lecture. From Mr. Cram's description Tascco is a primitive, colored postcard of a town with adobe houses with soft blue walls and tawny yellow roofs, and a cathedral which is an odd example of early architecture, rearing its spires against a distant background of cobalt mountains and azure sky.

Mrs. George Lee, who was dressed all in white, was particularly interested in Mr. Cram's informal talk, for she spent the winter before last in Mexico. With Mrs. Lee were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Doane, the latter wearing a black gown with a bright green jacket.

Miss Dorothy West was also in black. She wore a little tricorne straw hat and a black veil with her street suit. Mrs. Barrett Wendell wore black satin under her violet and satin wrap, and Mrs. Richard Sears, who was accompanied by her daughter, Mary Elizabeth, wore fuschia crepe trimmed with an American beauty scarf. Miss Sears was in black chiffon, over which she wore a long velvet cloak with a rose colored lining.

Others in the fashionably dressed audience were, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Ripley, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Binney, Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. H. Addington Bruce, Mrs. William Dana Orcutt and Mrs. Horatio Lamb.

Concert

Mrs. Edward Ballentine, Mrs. A. Sprague Coolidge, Mrs. Huntington P. Faxon, Mrs. Edward Burlingame Hill, and Mrs. Moses W. Ware are patronesses for the forthcoming concert of the Pierian Sodality of 1808, the Harvard University Orchestra, which is to be held in Paine Hall in the Harvard Music Building in Cambridge, on the evening of Tuesday, April 21.

New England Police Stories

'WILLIMANTIC SLEUTH SLAYING'

As Told by Ace Crime Reporters

Detective Found Slain

This is the 72nd in a series of true detective stories from New England police annals being presented daily by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser. Frank C. McLean, one of the ace reporters for the American and Sunday Advertiser, relates this gripping story of "The Sleuth Slaying."

By FRANK C. McLEAN

Quiet and homelike and entirely as usual the Jackson kitchen looked—except for the dead man on the floor!

Buddy, the house dog, lolled cosily by the stove, to a leg of which his leash was attached. Captain Kidd, the parrot, drowsed unexcitedly in his cage on the table. In the spout of a teakettle, steam was singing peacefully.

For a moment, lovely, dark-eyed Juanita Jackson, standing in the doorway, couldn't believe her eyes.

She couldn't believe that her father, lying there at her very feet wouldn't leap up in another instant to tell her laughingly that all this was a joke.

Yet he didn't leap up. He didn't stir. And staining his clothing and his gray hair and the floor all about him was blood, apparently from a ghastly wound just above his left cheekbone.

Juanita Jackson almost fainted, as she realized the truth.

Veteran County Detective Bill Jackson was either a murder victim or a suicide!

When 24-year-old Juanita, the daughter, had entered the house, her cheeks had been rosy from an auto ride in the frosty January air.

Touches Limp Hand

She was pale, however, as she bent to touch the dead man's limp hand.

One close glance assured her that her father had not been killed either by accident or by his own hand. He had been shot by some assailant who must have accosted him as he was about to go outdoors to the barn to tend the thoroughbred cattle which were his hobby, for he had donned his chore-doing costume of heavy jacket, rubber boots and cap with earlaps.

While details of the scene were registering themselves on the girl's subconscious mind, her first active thought was for her mother, Mrs. Gertrude Jackson, who, even now, must be coming toward the kitchen door from the garage, where she had remained to put away the family auto.

Mrs. Jackson was 50, and her heart, as her daugher knew, was none too strong. Her daughter met her at the door, led her to a chair.

"He's dead," Juanita said. "There's nothing you can do. Just sit quiet and be brave until I can call a doctor and telephone the police."

First to come in response to the daughter's summons was Dr. Fred M. Smith, the Jackson family physician. He merely confirmed what mother and daughter already knew.

Detective Jackson had been shot to death. There was no evidence of suicide.

Next to arrive were the Willimantic police. They were shocked by what they found, for every officer on the force had been well acquainted with the victim.

It seemed strange that this peaceful kitchen should have been the scene of Bill Jackson's exit from a world in which he had always played so active and colorful a part.

When 'Circumstance' Proved Lie

MRS. GERTRUDE JACKSON
FOR A MOMENT SHE COULDN'T BELIEVE HER EYES
WILLIAM E. JACKSON

Mrs. Gertrude Jackson, 50, who taking her own life gave the lie to the circumstantial 'evidence' which involved Deputy Sheriff Trenor A. Rice in the slaying of County Detective Bill Jackson of Willimantic, Ct. Mrs. Jackson left two letters confessing the crime.

He had been a prize-fighter in his youth. He had adventured up and down the Pacific coast with two-fisted, hard-drinking Jack London, who was later to become the author of best-selling, he-man fiction.

During the Spanish War, Jackson had served valiantly with "Teddy" Roosevelt's Rough Riders, winning the personal esteem of the square-jawed colonel whose subsequent election to the White House never caused him to forget his "old comrade, Bill."

Even when married and "settled down" in Willimantic, Detective Jackson had by no means stagnated. He had earned for himself a New England-wide reputation as a fearless and successful man-hunter.

As perhaps might have been anticipated, Bill Jackson had died "with his boots on," both figuratively and literally.

Yet it hadn't been in fair fight. That was easily established by investigators.

No weapon was found on the slain detective's body. In his bedroom, where he was accustomed to keep them, were the two guns which he used for "business."

Both of these were revolvers, one of .38 caliber, one of .32 caliber. Both were well-oiled and clean, showing no evidence of having recently been fired.

Other weapons in the house included a .22 caliber target rifle and a shotgun. Jackson had used these occasionally for hunting or for practice. They were clean and in their usual places.

Reconstruct Story

In an attempt to reconstruct the circumstances surrounding the killing, Willimantic police took down briefly the stories of Mrs. Jackson and of Juanita, the daughter.

Mrs. Jackson said that she had left the house at about ten minutes of six, driving downtown to pick up Juanita at the latter's little women's wear shop on Main street.

When she had last seen her husband, Mrs. Jackson said, he had been sitting in the kitchen, smoking his pipe and reading.

She had waved goodby to him, she said, and had told him that she and Juanita would be back home, in a few minutes, for supper.

Mr. Jackson was unable to suggest, offhand, any enemy of her husband's who might have had a motive for the murder. She was aware, she said, that Detective Jackson had received threatening letters from time to time, but these he had scornfully disregarded as "harmless."

The letters had always been anonymous, and Jackson had thrown them away or destroyed them.

Juanita Jackson, when it came her turn to talk, told police of having come home with her mother and of having then entered the back door of the house alone while her mother was putting the car in the garage.

Outside the house, Juanita said, there had been no indication of anything wrong.

Watchdog Quiet

A watchdog, "Captain," had been quiet in his kennel near the kitchen window. He was an unusually intelligent animal, of German shepherd stock, and would almost certainly have been excited and noisy if strangers had been prowling about the premises.

"In the kitchen, when I entered, Buddy, the house dog, was quiet, too," Juanita said. "He was lying by the stove, almost at my father's shoulder. And Captain Kidd, the parrot, wasn't even chattering to himself, although he always starts shrieking and cursing when he is excited.

"At first, I couldn't imagine what had happened to my father. Then I saw the blood and the wound on his face. When I tuched his hand, I knew he was dead."

Because of the prominence which County Detective Jackson had earned for himself in police affairs, public attention was immediately focussed on the mystery of his slaying.

The state offered a reward of $3000 for the arrest and conviction of the guilty person or persons, and State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn detailed to the case his star sleuth, State Detective Edward J. Hickey.

The Jackson home, a rambling little white farmhouse on Quarry street, Willimantic, was soon overrun with public and private investigators.

To keep these within bounds and to protect Mrs. Jackson and Juanita against unwarranted annoyance, there appeared at the murder scene a former close friend of the family, Deputy Sheriff Trenor A. Rice of Willimantic.

In his efforts in behalf of the widow and her charming daughter, 37-year-old Deputy Rice was inclined to be arbitrary, not only with newspapermen and police underlings but also with persons of political prominence.

"Who is this guy?" disgruntled reporters and officials were soon asking each other.

They discovered that Rice, like Jackson, had a colorful background. He had been at one time a manager of prize-fighters and he had a reputation of his own for being clever with his fists.

Rice's father had been killed in the Spanish war, a circumstance which had won the son the immediate respect and sympathy of Spanish War Veteran Bill Jackson.

Alone, after two unhappy marriages, Rice had come to Willimantic, had made the acquaintance of Jackson and had been invited by the latter to live temporarily at the Jackson home.

At the time of Jackson's death, which occurred on Jan. 29, 1929, Rice was living two miles away on a poultry farm which he had recently purchased. He had only left his quarters at the Jackson home two days previously.

According to neighborhood reports, which Rice hadn't attempted to deny, hard feeling had sprung up between him and Detective Jackson.

Cause of the rift, it was rumored, had been Jackson's objection to what he had thought to be a growing friendship between his daughter, Juanita, and Rice, who, though separated from his second wife, was not yet divorced.

It was apparent, while the murder investigation was in progress, that Rice's relations with Mrs. Jackson and Juanita had remained most cordial.

Very much less cordial was the mutual regard of Deputy Rice and County Detective Hickey.

First Questions

One of Hickey's first questions had to do with Rice's whereabouts at the time of the Jackson shooting.

This question was answered, apparently, by Joseph Paulos, original owner of the poultry farm which Rice had purchased.

Paulos and Rice had been together at the farm when Juanita Jackson had telephoned to say that her father was dead and that she and her mother wished that Rice would come at once to their home.

At that time, said Paulos, Rice had been in smoking jacket and slippers, reading the evening newspaper.

"I've got nothing to conceal," Rice told Detective Hickey, face to face. "My own feelings toward Jackson were friendly, whatever misapprehensions about me he may have had.

"I suppose you're itching to know what sort of gun I own, so I'll bring it over from the farm and you can examine it to your heart's content. It's a good gun, a .32 caliber Police Positive Colt, like Jackson's own revolver."

Rice was as good as his word. He produced his revolver. Hickey took it and turned it over to ballistics experts for examination.

On February 3, came Detective Jackson's funeral.

Deputy Rice, an honorary bearer walked to the grave with his hand on one side bar of the casket.

Detective Hickey, who had appointed himself to a similar office of honor, walked at the other side of the casket, studying Rice's face with an icy-cold scrutiny.

Not long after the funeral, Rice was arrested on suspicion. He was questioned and re-questioned. Eventually, on February 11, he was indicted by a Windham County grand jury, which found probable cause to hold him for the murder of his former friend and benefactor, Jackson.

As outlined by Detective Hickey, circumstances seemed to involve Rice in dangerous predicament.

The murder bullet, recovered from Jackson's skull by Medical Examiner Louis A. Mason, was found by experts to have been fired from a .32-caliber Colt revolver.

Rice's gun was a .32-caliber Colt!

The fatal shot had been fired from a distance of several feet, the medical examiner reported, the slain man's face having showed no powder burns. The killer's aim had been deadly in its acuracy.

Rice was known as a crack marksman.

The dogs and the parrot at the Jackson home hadn't been alarmed as they would have been at the presence of a stranger.

Rice was as familiar to them as any member of the Jackson household

In support of the government's allegation of hard feeling between Rice and Jackson, Detective Hickey had in his possession a note written by Jackson threatening Rice with court action.

A Connecticut newspaperman had discovered and photographed footprints at the Jackson house, and the government said that these footprints were Rice's.

As for Rice's "alibi," that could be exploded, Hickey thought, on the ground that there had been time, after the shooting, for Rice to go home to his own farm, change his clothes and be reading at his ease when Juanita Jackson telephoned.

Luckily for Rice—and luckily for Connecticut justice—there came new evidence into the case. And this new evidence was not circumstantial!

On February 13, County Coroner Arthur G. Bill held a Jackson death inquest, a proceeding independant of the grand jury and its indictments.

At this inquest, principal witnesses were Juanita Jackson and Mrs. Jackson. Juanita was on the stand for 45 minutes, her mother for an hour and 15 minutes.

Both women, after the inquest, returned to the Jackson home. There Juanita remained down stairs, talking with Mrs. Ada Adams, a family friend, and with Police Officer Pierre Marotte, who was there to protect the Jacksons.

Mrs. Jackson went upstairs, supposedly to her bedroom on the second floor.

From that general direction, a few moments later, came the sound of a sharp explosion.

Juanita, Mrs. Adams and the police officer, rushing to investigate found Mrs. Jackson dying. She had shot herself through the heart with the .22 caliber rifle which her husband had kept for target practice.

Able only to murmur her daughter's name, Mrs. Jackson breathed her last before a doctor could be summoned. But Medical Examiner Mason, removing the suicide victim's clothing, found two notes, which Mrs. Jackson had tucked in her stocking.

2 Notes Found

One of these notes was addressed to Deputy Sheriff Rice, the other to Rice's lawyer, former Attorney General King.

The note to King read:

Mrs. Gertrude T. Jackson to Attorney William A. King:

"Dear Mr. King:

"Will and I had a terrible fight over his physical condition. Trenor Rice was never mentioned in the argument. Trenor knew nothing of the argument. I alone was here with him. It was either he or I who was to be killed.

"I wouldn't leave Juanita alone with him. She knows the life I have lived. Trenor can tell what I put up with. E. B. can tell you Will threatened my life six weeks ago over a scrap about milking the cows. He has threatened me several times.

"I never was afraid of him until that day. He choked me almost to death. Then he grabbed the gun. I wrested it from him and in the few words that followed I shot him.

"This is a true confession. They must not harm Trenor. I love him as my own son. He knew nothing of it. They say he is guilty. He isn't. They are persecuting him, not prosecuting him. Give him my love.

"MRS. JACKSON."

The note addressed to Rice read:

"Dear son—Forgive me for the suffering this has caused you. I am to blame. You are not in any way responsible. Your name was never brought into the argument. It was over Will's physical condition. He has threatened to kill me twice before. This time it was either he or me, and I got the first shot.

"Hickey is too sure he has the case locked tight, but he is not so smart. He said he has the shell and more, but I flushed the shell down the sink and picked up the room. My dress had the sleeves torn out, but in the excitement no one saw it. Will choked me almost to death and would have shot me if I hadn't shot him. Be good. Lovingly,

"MOTHER."

Full contents of the notes were temporarily withheld from the public by Windham County officials, and neither of the notes was delivered to the person to whom it had been addressed.

At this juncture of affairs, Rice's distinguished battery of legal counsel went into swift and effective action

Attorneys King and Harvey, having failed to obtain the confession notes from either Detective Hickey, eMdical Examiner Mason or Coroner Bill, appealed not only to the courts but to the Connecticut Legislature.

They finally won a writ of mandamus, compelling county officials to surrender the notes to them.

And then they, in their turn, gave the notes to the newspapers.

That was the end of the case against Trenor A. Rice. The murder charge was nol prossed by State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford.

This time, the net of circumstantial evidence had failed to hold its victim.

"Buddy," the Jackson house dog; "Captain," the watchdog; "Captain Kidd," the parrot, couldn't be cited as silent witnesses against Rice, the family friend.

True, the dogs and the bird had known Rice.

But they had known Mrs. Jackson, too!

And the .32-caliber bullet, which fitted Rice's gun, was no longer a threat to his life and his liberty, for that bullet fitted Jackson's gun equally well.

"Circumstances" had lied.

But Mrs Jackson, sacrificing her life to do it, had confuted them with facts!

Tomorrow in the Boston Evening American the true detective series will continue with "The Brookline Cop-Killer," by Henry L. Daily.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

Members of the 4-H clubs of Middlesex County will get the thrill of building model planes and competing in Junior Birdmen contests for trophies, medals and other awards, under plans being advanced by George E. Erickson, county club agent, 19 Everett street, Concord.

Under direction of Club Agent Erickson, Robert Cram, his assistant, visited Junior Birdmen headquarters recently and obtained information on the Birdmen organization, squadron plans, activities and official contests.

He is hoping to stage an outdoor model plane flying meet on Saturday, May 16, for club members who are already Junior Birdmen or who enroll before that date.

He obtained specifications of three models, a glider, hand-launched stick model and cabin model and proposes to hold the contest under Junior Birdmen rules.

Selections of these models will help clear the path for those members who will want to enter the Junior Birdmen 1936 Outdoor Air Races on June 27, to decide the championship of New England. At least two of the models will probably be eligible for those listed in the outdoor tournament.

Appropriate prizes are expected to be awarded to winners of the Concord contest in which two and possibly three models will be flown in endurance flights.

The decision of County Club Agent Erickson is expected not only to lend additional zest to the 4-H club program but to spur Junior Birdmen activity in Concord and vicinity.

Four-H club work is conducted in this commonwealth by the Massachusetts State College, U. S. Department of Agriculture and the County Extension Service.

Cram will be one of those who receive first copies of the manual listing specifications of models and rules for the coming outdoor air races. Others who have already made requests are:

Leonard Booth, 46 Teel street, Arlington; Charles Freeman, 64 Lawrence avenue, Roxbury; Torrey L. Capo, Quincy; Levy Walba, 911 Morton street, Mattapan, and Peter Alphas, 111 Union Park street, Boston.

Details of the air races are to be announced in the Boston Sunday Advertiser on April 26.

Luxury Model

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER 22

Since her cocktail party, which was the first day on which she had met Jimmy Randolph, Lorraine had not been wasting her time.

If the School of Architectural Design "exchanged" students between New York and France she could—and did—pull strings on Jimmy's behalf, as she had done for Luana Waters in the fashion parade. Only for Jimmy she exerted herself to a greater degree, because men were so much more likeable than girls, and she was definitely attracted to Jimmy Randolph.

Her mind had dwelled pleasureably on "the merry month of May" in Paris, with Jimmy alongside . . .

The horse-chestnut trees would be flowering on the Champs Elysees, the big white buildings glittering like wedding cakes among the greenery of the spring foliage.

She would take him to Longchamps with her, to the races, and afterwards they would take tea together at a delightful resort in the woods.

Then they would motor to one of the old bridges that spanned the Seine and watch the sunset that was so beautiful in Paris.

Thereafter there would be champagne cocktails in the ladies' bar of a swank hotel in the Place Vendome. Loads of her feminine cronies would be there, as usual, for their aperitif before dinner, to see and to be seen, and to gossip.

They would envy her having a handsome young American, like Jimmy, since Oriental gigolos were "out."

After the envying stares and the cocktails, they would motor out to some entrancing restaurant in the forest, and have dinner and dance.

Later, there were the nightclubs. Paris was lifting out of the world depression.

They would run down to Deauville on a Saturday for the yacht racing. Or motor to Le Touquet and gamble in the casino set among the trees, and watch the pigeon shooting.

She would remain in Paris throughout May and June, weekending of course at the abovementioned fashionable resorts.

Jimmy would be on hand for the Grande Semaine, which is the high light of the season in the Gay Capital . . . indeed, marking its finish, with the ending of the racing.

She would take the cure in Aix thereafter . . . for a scant two weeks . . . and then invite Jimmy to her villa in Cannes.

The season of high summer in the South had become fashionable, especially among Americans.

It would be great fun to have Jimmy as one of her guests at the villa, more especially as he had never been abroad before, and would be impressed by everything.

Enchanted nights in the Cannes Casino, and in the Casino at Juan-les-Pins. They would dine al fresco on the terrace, with divine tzigane music playing, and dance together with the soft airs of the South fanning them, and the Mediterranean splashing gently alongside.

There would be yachting on the blue waters. They would put in at Monte Carlo, and at the quaint harbor of Villefranche.

There was a darling, quaint little inn on the quay, there, where one ate marvellous bouillebaisse and shrimps.

They would motor to the famous restaurant just outside Beaulieu, where one ate food that could be bettered in no other part of Europe.

There was the ideal inn of the mountains, too, where one could survey the coastline by moonlight, and watch the lights spring up on the yachts at anchor, and where they served delicious wines and food.

The usual American crowd would be at Cap d'Antibes. She would go swimming with Jimmy in the deep pools directly beneath the little Yacht Club in which one met so many famous folk at luncheon. The "Cap" was fashionable.

It was a far cry from this boy's shabby studio in Greenwich Village. She started to tell him all about it now . . .

Suddenly he interrupted her with: "Great heavens! My clock has stopped! What time is it, Mrs. Vandaveer?"

Lorraine's Plot

Through her lorgnette she glanced at her jewelled wristwatch. Odd that he was so brusque!

"A few moments after six-thirty—"

He jumped to his feet, exclaiming: "Good Lord! I'm an hour late for my appointment!"

Mrs. Joel Vandaveer was chagrined.

Her husband being out of town for the evening, she had planned to take Jimmy Randolph home to her penthouse for dinner.

Now after a scant ten minutes or so in his studio—he was going to be off like a deer!

The fact that he seemed terribly upset about missing his engagement . . . or anyhow, being an hour late for it . . . convinced her that it was with a woman.

Luana Waters had brought him to her cocktail party.

Was he epris of the girl?

She said now, ever so sweetly, and watching his face keenly: "My car's downstairs. I'll run you wherever you want to go."

He hesitated. "But I shall have missed her by now."

How naively boyish and undiplomatic of him, she thought, half amused, and half dashed. Had he no savoir-faire? Didn't he know better than to drag in one woman before another . . . particularly when that other had condescended to visit him on shabby Elizabeth street, which was such an utter contrast to her own milieu?

"Then telephone her?" she suggested, adding, with a touch of malice: "Better think of some good fib."

"I have no telephone," said Jimmy frankly. He still looked worried. What on earth would Luana think?

"Then if you can't reach her, drop her a little note and plead an unavoidable engagement?" In the deepening twilight she gave a long, meaning look at the young man.

It seemed to challenge him with her sex-appeal and beauty. It said plainly: "Girls are plentiful in this town as blackberries on country hedges, but there's only one Lorraine Vandaveer . . ."

He did not catch the full import, but enough to know that he must seem churlish to this elegant creature.

How amazed he would have been had he realized that in the long pause that followed, Luana herself was looking at them with amazade eyes through the skylight window of the studio!

"Now what can we do to put matters right?" asked Lorraine briskly. "I feel responsible for keeping you here, though as a matter of fact if your appointment was an hour ago, I've only been here about 15 minutes."

"I'm delighted you came here," said Jimmy lamely, and unconvincingly.

She seized her chance. "As a matter of fact, I was hoping you might be free to come up to the house and dine?"

Repeated Throw-In Plays

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

No weapon at a declarer's command can be used as often, or with such deadly result, as the throw-in play.

Not so spectacular as its lordly relative, the squeeze, it is more valuable simply because opportunities for its use occur on a much higher percentage of hands.

Moreover, it is more democratic than the squeeze play; its technique can be mastered by players of less than expert calibre. Today's hand is a good example of the repeated throw-in.

West opened the deuce of diamonds, East played the Jack and South won with the Queen. A heart was next led and to declarer's disgust, the Queen went up from West, making it quite apparent that dummy could not win more than two heart tricks.

The King covered the Queen and East won the Ace, returning a diamond. Declarer promptly played the Ace—he had a use for that small diamond. He crossed to dummy's King of spades and led a third round of diamonds himself, praying that West's opening deuce lead had been honest and that he had only a four-card suit.

West, thrown on lead, cashed his two good diamonds but could not find a safe exit. Since South had discarded a low spade on the fourth diamond, West chose that lead. Declarer won the Jack, led the Ace and threw West back on lead with the spade Queen.

Now a club had to be led up to South's major tenace for two tricks, and finally dummy's two heart tricks were cashed for the eighth and ninth tricks.

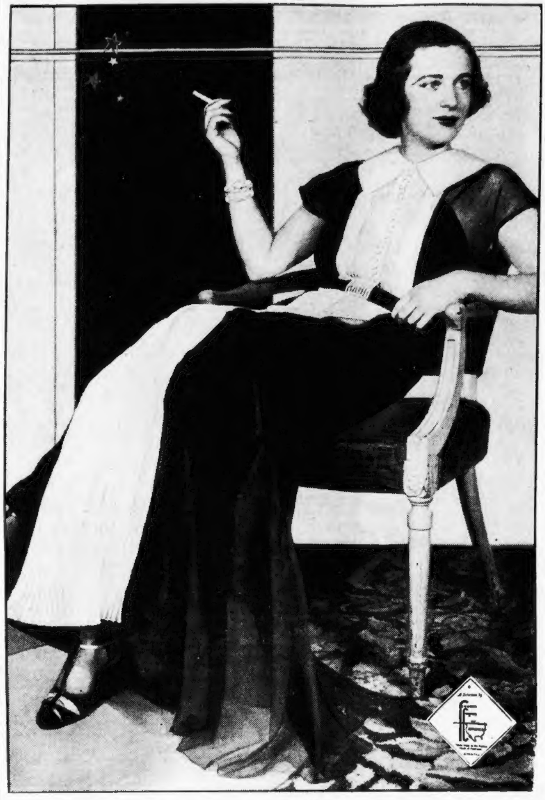
ESCAPE BLOCKED

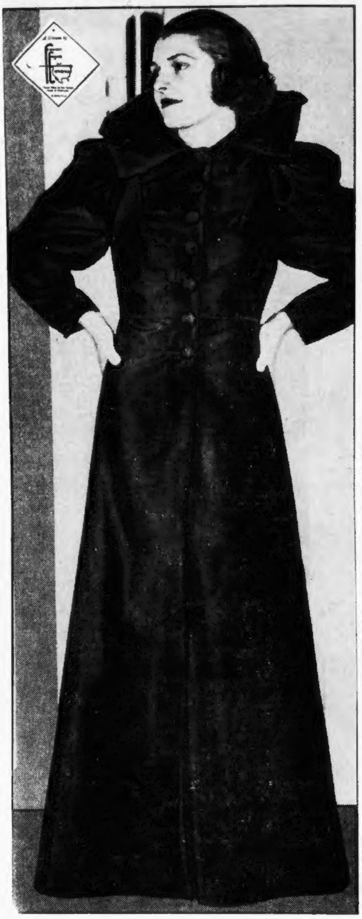
West could not have escaped, after winning the diamonds, by first leading a club instead of a spade. South would win, and cash two heart tricks in the dummy immediately. West could not discard conveniently.

Two spade discards would of course set up declarer's entire suit; one spade and one club discard would simply pave the way for the declarer to lead from dummy to his club Ace and throw West back on lead for his only club trick.

After that a spade lead to South's A J would have given the same result.

Sheer or Crisp, Dark Fashions Win Congress





THERE'S a sure trick to be turned for evening glamour, and that's to wear something crisp and sheer—and dark! Mark the words of the Fashion Congress; it'll do things for you, whether you're in the smart young-marrieds class or bound for your first prom this sprightly April! Two Fashion Congress winners that illustrate the point are modeled by two of the town's most charming debutantes. Above, Miss Carolyn Pierce shows a black marquisette dinner dress with pleated white organdy cutting a swath down the front . . . no more perfect outfit for spring concerts or the opening Pops. And, right, a stately faille taffeta wrap, modeled by Miss Alice Scofield, will lend drama to any evening . . . there's Margot influence in the collar, and Gibson Girl pertness in the sleeves.

If you wish for shopping information on either Fashion Congress winner, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Poached APRICOT Fluff IS NEW

By MARTHA LEE

In many households, the family enjoys a light tasty dessert, that is filling without being fattening, to top off spring meals. Poached Apricot Fluff answers these requirements.

It is light and fluffy and, at the same time, nourishing. It is made with whole milk, eggs and dried fruit, just the ingredients we like in spring meals when appetites need tempting with delicacies. It is served with a soft custard poured over the top of the hot Apricot Fluff.

APRICOT FLUFF

Cover dried apricots with fresh warm water and let stand five minutes. Wash well and cover with fresh water. Place on stove and heat to just below simmering point for two hours. Add ½ cup sugar to 1 pound apricots and cool. Measure 1 cup of cooked apricots and mash to a pulp. For six to eight servings you will need:

1 cup cooked, sweetened, dried apricots
4 egg whites
6 tablespoons powdered sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups milk
Salt

Beat egg whites until stiff, add sugar, a small portion at a time, beating well after each addition. Combine cup of apricot pulp, salt, vanilla, and whip into egg whites. Bring milk to a boil in a shallow pan and remove from fire. Drop puffs by spoonfuls into hot milk and let stand for about 2 minutes, dipping hot milk over top of puffs. Turn puffs and repeat. Lift to platter. Heat milk to boiling again before adding more puffs. Serve with delicately flavored soft vanilla custard. You can use any favorite recipe for soft custard to serve with it.

For convenience, we offer here a popular vanilla custard that is especially good.

VANILLA CUSTARD

2 cups milk, scalded
6 egg yolks or 3 eggs
¼ cup sugar
Few grains salt
½ teaspoon vanilla

Beat eggs slightly; beat in the sugar and salt; add scalded milk to egg and sugar mixture. Place custard in top of double boiler; stir over hot water until mixture coats spoon. Add vanilla and pour into stem glasses.

APRICOT WHIP

2½ cups cooked dried apricots
¾ cup granulated sugar
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
¼ teaspoon ginger
18 marshmallows
1½ cups whipping cream

Mash hot apricots to a pulp, add sugar, spices and mix thoroughly; cool. Cut marshmallows into small pieces, add to cool apricots and mix well. Whip cream until thick, but not stiff. Fold fruit mixture into cream a small portion at a time. Chill. Serves 12.

LEE CHOW READY FOR OPENING OF "LOCK-BOX"

CHAPTER 625

THERE was so much vehemence in Lillian's manner as she told me she would not let me spoil the heaven-sent opportunity for Dicky to get away from his partnership that I knew it was useless to argue with her.

Indeed, I had to confess to myself that I was meanly glad she had denied the protest I had made against Edith's driving back to Marvin.

"I am not able to argue with you," I told her. "But—" I made one last snatch at my altruism, "you'll hear what Harriet says about her first."

"Of course," she said. "But I'm betting two to one that Harriet declares her fit to travel."

She would have lost the bet, however, if she had named the stake or designated anyone to collect it. I did not see Harriet go out with Dicky, but less than a quarter of an hour after Lillian and I had come back from the bungalow, Dicky's agitated knock sounded on the door.

"Lie still, and keep still!" Lillian admonished. "I'll let him in, and please let me do the talking."

EDITH VERY SICK

"Willingly," I murmured with a faint grin, and she flashed me an answering smile as she opened the door.

"Here's a pretty kettle of chowder!" Dicky exclaimed when Lillian had closed and locked the door after him. His voice was low, inaudible outside, but charged with excitement.

"Well! You can stir it just as satisfactorily sitting down," Lillian said comfortingly, drawing out a chair. Dicky sank into it as if he were spent with running, and looked helplessly from one to the other of us.

"Harriet says Ede's in pretty bad shape," he said. 'Oh! nothing that a good sleep cannot cure, but it won't be safe for her to drive back for several hours—if then. Now what's to be done?"

Every man when puzzled has something of the boy in him, and Dicky looked so like a bewildered urchin that I had hard work to keep from springing up and throwing my arms around him. But I had promised Lillian to "lie still and keep still," so I stayed silent and motionless, waiting for her answer.

LILLIAN'S PLAN

It came promptly, reassuringly. "That's easy. Have your august brother-in-law prescribe a sleeping potion, and have Harriet stay with her until she gets to sleep. Ask Mrs. Ticer to come over to the bungalow and keep the fires going, and be on hand if Ede should happen to awaken. But she won't, not if I know Dr. Braithwaite's sleeping powders, and I think I do. She'll sleep right straight through the box opening and beyond. She'll waken in a saner mood, and then, also, we'll have time to deal with her."

Dickey's face took on a ludicrously relieved expression.

"That's the ticket!" he said. "What a life saver you are, Lil! I'll cut back to Harriet, and ask her to do her darndest."

"And I'll telephone Mrs. Ticer and ask her to com over," Lillian said, adding after he had gone out, "And won't Mrs. Ticer like THAT job! She detests Ede, you know."

READY FOR THE BOX-OPENING

"Yes, I know," I said slowly for I had often noticed the aversion my neighbor cherished for Edith. "But I don't know why. Edith always treats her courteously."

"She doesn't know why!" Lillian apostrophized, raising her eyebrows. "Did it ever occur to you that you have the rare faculty of winning loyalty and genuine affection amounting almost to adoration from the people who work for you? Katie, Jim, the Ticers—all of them would fight for you at the drop of a hat, and they all resent fiercely any attempt of anyone to injure you.

"And in these later years, Ede hasn't made any secret of the fact that she's out to annex your scalp and your husband. Therefore, she's anathema to all your loyal retainers. And not only to them,' she added. "I could skin her alive with joy and eclat, also aplomb."

There was a vindictive note in her laugh-provoking tirade which emphasized something I have known for years, but which always "warms the cockles of my heart" every time I realize it afresh. It is the strong, loyal affection which this old friend bears me. She would fight—die, if need be—for me, as I would for her, and the knowledge of such protective affection is very precious to me.

"You dear!" I said, with shining eyes, but she was not listening. Her eyes were turned to the door.

"That's Harry's step," she said. "Yes! He's stopping and knocking."

She was at the door as she spoke and threw it open before her stalwart husband could knock the second time. But the big man patiently had no time to tarry.

"Hugh says to tell you that Lee Chow will be ready to open that box an hour from now. The chief is with Hugh in the library, arranging everything, but you're to tell everybody to be ready—and quiet."

Facial Paralysis Is Serious Ailment

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

RECENTLY several letters have come to me asking questions about "trigeminal neuralgia".

Unfortunately, there is a great deal of confusion about it. Many persons erroneously believe that any irritation of the facial nerve is due to trigeminal neuralgia.

Today, I want to tell you about facial paralysis. Facial paralysis, or "Bell's palsy" as the doctors call it, is often confused with other disturbances of the facial nerve. Too often it is mistaken for simple neuralgia or neuritis. In most instances Bell's palsy is rather serious, requiring careful medical attention.

The symptoms are due to some damage of the facial nerve, the nerve which controls certain muscles of the face. The ailment may result from a blow or other injury to this nerve. Should the nerve be injured, the muscles which are supplied by the branches of the facial nerve are affected.

As a rule, the first sign is a feeling of discomfort which is soon followed by severe pain in the face on the affected side. Usually it is located just below or behind the ear. Paralysis of the muscles may, or may not be present at this time, but sooner or later it appears.

When this occurs the victim has no control of the affected muscles. Consequently there is a drooping of that side of the face. The good facial muscles of the other side seem unusually active. They pull the normal side away from the paralyzed one. This produces a puckering of the lips and makes difficult whistling, smoking and even talking.

Contrary to a common belief, Bell's palsy is not incurable. The paralysis may slowly wear off, permitting a return of function in the diseased muscles. It is difficult to estimate how long it will take for a marked improvement to appear.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Helpful Advice Awaits All Girls Who Plan To Be Married

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The simple wedding is best.

That is my advice to young couples planning marriages this season. The love that binds them together is sufficient in itself. Lavish floral displays, great receptions

The ideal marriage is the one whose cost imposes no serious strain on the finances of the contracting parties. Unnecessary debts and uncalled for obligations are not only poor judgment, but a serious threat to future happiness.

However, I do advise all young people to put aside all thoughts of run-away marriages, performed by town clerks, justices and other officials in distant places. It is a thousand times better to have the marriage ceremony performed in the community church or rectory in the presence of a few friends and relatives.

To shroud in secrecy the new life into which young men and women are entering is foolhardy. Too often these elopements invite scandal and malicious inferences which can never be lived down nor forgotten, no matter how much explaining is done.

If I were to be a bride this season, I would select a simple dress which I could wear many times during my honeymoon. I would invite my family and only my nearest friends. And I would plan an inexpensive trip, the happy memories of which would be with me as long as I lived

I urge all young women who plan to be married to write to me. I shall be delighted to assist them with their weddings in every way possible. If there are difficulties, as there frequently are, I shall do my best to find a solution.

Today's $5 award goes to Mrs. J. S., who writes me this beautiful letter:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been reading your column for many years. I think it is one of the most helpful columns to young people. And I encourage all whom I know to read it.

You remind me of a married woman with children who understands the problems of all American mothers of today.

I was married when I was young and had my children close together. Now I have five, and there are only seven years between the first and last.

My husband is an ideal father The children are his world. He spends his evenings playing with them and sharing their youthful interests

Honestly, Miss Fairfax, it almost seems that I were a girl again. Two and three times a week I go to dances with my husband and children, and we have the grandest times.

Of course, we have had numerous difficulties. Money was frequently scarce in the home. Also, there was sickness and the usual misunderstandings. But we had the courage to fight. And now, when both my husband and I are in our 40's, God has blessed us.

The girl who marries young and has a large family makes no mistake. The things she misses in her 20's and 30's are returned to her a hundred fold in her 40's.

Had I remained single, I should now be leading one solitary and regretful life. Because I married in my teens, I am today enjoying seven wonderful lives—my own, my husband's and my five children's.

My only fear is that it is too good to be true. MRS. J. S.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I am 15 years of age and attend high school. Although I give all my time to my studies, my parents are not satisfied They insist that I go to work and turn over my wages to them

It isn't because they need the money. Rather, it's because my older sister went to work at 15. What's good for one is good for another. That is my parents' slogan. I hear it from morning to night. HELPLESS.

DEAR HELPLESS:

Tell your parents from me that the law will not permit you to leave school and go to work at 15. And even if there were no such legislation, you'd be better to continue your studies. There are thousands of girls 18, 19 and 20 years of age who can't get jobs and must idle away their time at home.

Every mother and father who has the slightest love for sons and daughters will insist on their getting at least a high school education. Those who can't see its advantages are too ignorant to be entrusted with the care of children.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

When I was very young, I had an unfortunate experience. The baby died, and my family did its best to save me from scandal

Eleven years ago I met a young man who was clean and fine. I worried and didn't know what to do when he asked me to marry him. But one day, when we were alone, I told him what had happened.

Honestly, I thought it would mean the end of his love for me, as he is an only child and never saw the sordid side of life

To my surprise he only smiled and said:

"I don't care what has happened. All that matters is that you are mine and from now on we are going to be happy."

I am glad I had the courage to tell him. We have now been married ten years and could not be happier. Not once has my husband mentioned the unfortunate situation which came so near wrecking my life.

All girls who have had trouble early in life should confide in the men who offer them marriage. Courage pays large dividends.

MRS. V. M.

MY DEAR MRS. V. M.,

I agree with you. It is a thousand times better to reveal scandal yourself than to have it told by strangers with the usual embellishments.

A marriage built on mutual confidence cannot but succeed.

Overture to a Fresh and Radiant Skin

POSED BY CLAIRE TREVOR

Abnormally Dry Skins Needs Special Facial Muscle Treatment

By DONNA GRACE

THE skin that is habitually too dry may indicate a lack of fat in the entire system, but it usually means that the skin itself and the underlying glands are lacking natural oils.

We know that some of our very stout and overweight sisters have very dry skins, so it is quite evident that the cure for this must be in treating the skin itself.

We know that the skin is divided into three main layers The outer layer is known as the cuticle or epidermis; the middle layer the corium or derma, and the lower layer the subcutaneous tissue. You may not be so interested in those anatomical terms but in this age of wanting to know the "why" of everything, it will help you to realize why we recommend certain methods of treatment for the skin

The subcutaneous tissue or lower layer supplies the sebum or process by which the skin is kept soft and pliable It is so important to the general welfare of the skin that without it the skin would dry out and become hard and rough. One professor of physiology calls it "nature's cold cream."

Due to climate, overheated rooms and various causes, we find that the skin function is interfered with so that we have an abnormal dryness or an excessive oily skin. You may be surprised to learn that the same fundamental treatment is necessary for both of these abnormal conditions. That treatment is exercises for the facial muscles, manipulation (and often friction) of the skin to promote a good circulation

The outer dry skin is the chiffon layer that is constantly shedding When this is interfered with we have a dryness with a clogged pore condition that arrests the lubricating process. When the skin is too oily it means that the outer skin does not hold and assimilate "nature's cold cream." The glands are inactive and not contracting as they should. This condition is sometimes due to a tense nervousness, but the external treatment is again the manipulation of the skin and facial muscles.

Skin and beauty specialists, as well as cosmetic manufacturers, have made a scientific study of the reaction of the skin to various treatments. We know that there are certain treatments to remove the dry chiffon layers; movements combined with creams and stimulating applications that will restore a normal circulation.

I will be glad to send you my Exercises for the Face and Neck if you will enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope for your reply and address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

Low-Priced Foods Are High in Calories

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

SLIMMING down on rising food prices taxes the ingenuity of the housewife, for as a rule the lower-priced foods come high in calories It takes careful food selection to balance the scales on a low food budget.

Many of the lower priced meats, however, are comparatively low in calories. Round steak is no higher in calories than sirloin, and hamburger is easier on your figure and your purse than pork chop.

A toasted ground round steak sandwich, which is given in the leaflet, "Reducer's Recipes," makes a delicious and inexpensive supper dish

The calorie count of various kinds of meats is found in the Calorie Chart In answer to many requests for the calorie list for fish, is the following compilation

PORTION	CALORIES
Cod, 5 oz. 3½x2½x1 in.	100
Smoked Herring 3½ oz.	[illegible]
Salmon, canned, ¾ cup	[illegible]
Fresh Bluefish, 4 oz., 3x2½x1 in.	100

If, like Old Mother Hubbard, you sometimes find the cupboard bare—except for a reserve of staples—you must learn to prepare your starch meals with the fewest calories

When the main course is spaghetti or macaroni, cook it with tomato sauce instead of cheese and cream sauce. Starch supplies nothing but calorie, and in order to provide the necessary protein add ground round steak, that good old pre-payday standby. Your family will like this dish

One-half package spaghetti (4 ounces), 1 small can tomato soup, 1 small can water, ½ green pepper, chopped fine, 1 chopped onion, seasoning, ½ pound ground round steak.

Boil the spaghetti for 20 minutes in salted water; fry the onions and seasoned round steak with one tablespoon of fat. Mix all ingredients together, stir in the seasoning and place in baking pan. Bake 45 minutes in moderate oven.

Former King Alfonso of Spain, uncle of Prince Alfonso, Austrian Archduke Friedrich, and numerous representatives of the Hausburg Bourbon and other royal houses drew the cheers of the throng.

The bride wore a gown of light silver lame, a voluminous veil, an orange blossom coronet and a train 15 feet long.

FUTURE VETS UNITE

But 'Patriots' Resent Yale Ribbing

New Haven, Ct., April 16 (INS)—Recruiting officers opened today in residential colleges of Yale University to the "Veterans of Future Wars," an aftermath of the mock riot and demands for $1000 bonus staged before the Alpha Delta Phi house where the Yale Political Union was holding a debate on the Hauptmann trial.

Pup tents were pitched on the lawn, bacon sizzled in a frying pan and a hurried "call" went out for the "student national guard."

Students in uniforms and trench hats, armed with wooden rifles, "battled" the bonus marchers as firecrackers added a realistic touch.

Meanwhile, patriotic organizations denounced it as a "mockery on patriotism." Frank Lee, president of the New Haven Chapter, Yankee Division Veterans' Association, announced "we plan to take immediate action."

TRAPPED TRIO FEARED DEAD

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

One of the old traditions of the Classical Department of Harvard College is the occasional production of a classic tragedy or comedy in the original tongue and with scenery and costumes approximating as closely as possible the fashions of the ancient productions. Perhaps the most famous was the first, the celebrated "King Oedipus." This year the piece will be an old comedy by Plautus adapted freely from a Greek original. Its title is the "Mostellaria, the Tale of a Bogey," all about a shrewd servant who keeps his master's son from detection for having married a slave girl during his father's absence. The father unexpectedly returns and the slave gives out that the house is haunted, to keep the old gentleman from entering and finding the girl. It ends happily, of course.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The piece will be given at Sanders Theater tonight and tomorrow evening. Tuesday evening's performance was private for classical teachers and students all over New England.

Use of Mask Chief Novelty for Comedy

The chief novelty about a Roman comedy is that masks were used, highly stylized, to represent well known and conventional types of character. These are to be used this week. The old types of comedy were usually old men, cross and kindly, the busybody, the suspicious, the parasite, the sycophant, the young hero, the ingenue, the old women, the exotic foreigner, the boastful soldier, the matron, the bride, the courtesan, and the various types of slaves, the best known of whom was the sly and clever one, like the Figaro of Beaumarchais, a descendant of the type. Everyone knew the masks and thus each character was self-explanatory.

The robes and masks for this production were made by the students at the Vesper George School of Art, as was also the scenery, copied from Pompeiian murals. The coaching was done by Professors Little and Packard of the Latin and Public Speaking departments respectively. Everett Helm, arranger for the football band, leads the orchestra and a couple of dozen boys act the parts, including Ralph Lazarro, '36, of Wakefield and Walter S. White, '36, of Cambridge.

Sixth Classical Club Play in Fifty Years

This will be the sixth play presented by the Harvard Classical Club in a period of over fifty years. The most famous production was the original presentation of Sophocles' "Oedipus," given in Sanders Theater in 1881, with George Lyman Kittredge as prompter, Owen Wister as Messenger, George Riddle as the King, and, I believe, Curtis Guild as Teiresias. The story is that later the Globe Theater put on the piece for a whole week in English to crowded houses. Charles Eliot Norton designed the scenery and John Knowles Paine wrote the musical score.

The next performance was the Phormio of Terence, in 1894, precisely the kind of play that is being given this week, a Latin comedy of intrigue. In 1906 when I was still a freshman I saw an elaborate out of door production in the Stadium of the "Agamemnon" of Aeschylus, with a large army of supernumeraries and two real chariots drawn by cream Spartan ponies, handsome little animals. A young Englishman, Windham-Ghittens played Clytemnestra and was one of the most splended tragic figures I ever saw on any stage.

A law school man who didn't know a word of Greek played the leader of the chorus. From a pit dug under the altar, covered with transparent cheesecloth on the side away from the audience, the orchestra played doleful music, presumably Greek, on a couple of oboes, and a prompter with a megaphone called softly the opening syllables of every mouth-filling Greek line to the barbarians who had to speak them.

Professor Gulick Memorable Figure

It was a memorable performance. Especially I remember a glimpse of Professor Gulick at rehearsal, tall, severe, looking like a combination of the late Dante Alighieri and the late Woodrow Wilson, striding over the turf dangling over his shoulders the dead (stuffed) bodies of the King of Kings and his bloodthirsty consort. Not a smile on him.

I can't think of much harder work than to prepare and stage a play in a dead language, the pronunciation of which has never been completely determined. But in every generation there are always a few enthusiasts willing to undergo the labor for the pleasure and instruction of others.

Harvard Digs 'N Scrapes!

Relics Of Past Return

Acids Recoin Them

John P. Brown, Charlestown, Georgian archaeologist and president of the Georgian Society of America, working at the old Harvard Hall. In his excavation of this soup kitchen he has found beer bottles containing beverages of 1765 to 1815, the period when the kitchen was in use.

A seagull in the upper panel and a turtle in the lower panel of this closet door from room of Harvard freshman, Nathan M. Platt at 25 Stoughton Hall, Cambridge, was removed to the Fogg Museum. Janice Loeb, Radcliffe graduate student is studying the door.

'BEASTS,' BOTTLES FOUND IN 'YARD'

EXHIBITS FOR TERCENTENARY

With 300 years of its past up for inspection this year, Harvard is digging and scraping in a big way.

Today's yield: 1 seagull, 1 turtle, 1 Georgian fireplace and soup kettle and 1001 broken beer bottles!

The animals named are painted creatures, asleep for 80 years beneath layers and layers of less artistic paint. William Hazeltine famous 19th century painter, did the decorations on a closet door when an undergraduate at Harvard.

For decades the ornamentation was neglected and buried, until this spring Herbert Hazeltine, son of the painter and himself a sculptor, gave Harvard information about the forgotten "beasts."

Acids applied to the crusted coats of paint by skilled technicians at the Fogg Art Museum finally delivered the original drawings to the light of day once more. An artistic Rip Van Winkle thing'

Meanwhile, across the yard, John P. Brown, of Charlestown, president of the Georgian Society of America, broke through a cellar wall in the historic Harvard Hall and laid bare an ancient fireplace and soup kettle, once used to cook Harvard boys' boiled New England dinners back in the days of Concord and Lexington.

The fireplace had been in use since 1765 and was blocked up in 1815, when the dining hall was shifted to University Hall, now the administration building. In the fireplace were found broken beer bottles, dating from the days when beer was "the" Harvard beverage.

Both the adorned door and the re-opened fireplace are to be prepared as exhibits for the Harvard tercentenary program in the fall.

8th Victim Dies

Penn Yan, N. Y., April 16 (INS) Mrs. George Housel, 55, died today in the Soldiers and Sailors Hospital of burns, exposure and shock, suffered when fire swept her farmhouse at Rushville March 1, taking the lives of her daughter and six grandchildren.

Pope Hears Women Sing 'Blue Danube'

Vatican City, April 16 (INS)—Pope Pius XI today heard voices of 106 men and women unite in the strains of Austria's oldest favorite, Strauss' "Blue Danube" waltz.

The singers were members of the choir of the Vienna Oepra Company. They sang the waltz as part of a private 40-minute concert staged for Pope Pius in the consistory hall of the Vatican.

At the request of Herr Weingartner, director of the Vienna opera, the Pope consented to hear the "Blue Danube" sung.

After the choir completed the program, consisting of sacred music, two Brahms selections and two Tyrolean folksongs, the director asked the Pope to hear the singers render their favorite piece.

The Pope heard the concert from a stall of the consistoryhall. He presented his ring to all the musicians to be kissed and distributed drawings of a section of the Vatican catacombs as souvenirs. He also complimented the singers on their renditions.

As the Pope left the room the entire chorus cheered three times, shouting:

"Hock der heilige sater."

The performance marked the first time in recent papal history that a large group of women singers has participated in such a rendition for a Pope. Previously, boys have replaced women in choruses singing for the pontiff.

BOOST IN WPA WAGES SEEN

Washington, April 16 (INS) Administration plans for adoption of the "prevailing wage" system on Works Projects Administration projects on a large scale were reported today as a House group announced a campaign to boost relief workers pay.

The relief administration has given positive assurance to him said Chairman Connery (D.) of Massachusetts of the House labor committee, that it will pay the wage rate prevailing in various communities.

$1000 Ransom Bills Appear in Seattle

San Francisco, April 16 (AP)—The Examiner said today it had learned nearly $1000 of the $200,000 ransom paid for the release of George Weyerhaeuser had been passed recently in Seattle, with serial numbers changed.

Department of Justice agents were rushed to the Pacific Northwest in a hunt for William Dainard, alias William Mahan, accused as the leader of the gang which kidnaped the nine-year-old lumber heir from a street in Tacoma, Wash., a year ago.

Rumanian Quintuplets 'Cannot Live'

Bucharest, Rumania, Apr. 16 (AP)—Government [illegible] authorities confirmed today the birth of quintuplets to a [illegible] mother in a [illegible] but said it was unlikely the five children would live because of malformation and lack of vital organs.

The children and their mother, Mrs. Maria Lingurari, 2[illegible], were rushed by gendarmes from Hodos in the Bihor district of Transylvania to a hospital in Oradea, where Dr. George [illegible] the quintuplets [illegible].

One of the five was born separately, he said; the others joined in pairs.

The mother was reported recovering from the ordeal.

American Medical Association records show the Dionne sisters of Callander, Ont., now nearly two years old, are the only quintuplets of authenticated record who have reached that age.

The association reports indicate only 30 instances in 500 years of the birth of quintuplets and the Dionne sisters are the only ones who have lived longer than 30 days.

W. Concord Man Ready To Help

KNOWS MINE PASSAGEWAY

Thoroughly acquainted with the structure of the Moose River, N. S., mine, in which three men were trapped, Harvey Higgins, 62, Pleasant street, West Concord, today stood ready to rush to Nova Scotia if his aid was sought.

At the same time his wife was overjoyed that he had declined an offer made two weeks ago to return to work at the mine.

Higgins himself held out little hope for the [illegible], pointing out that falling rocks which trapped the men Sunday had probably broken water pipes and flooded the interior of the mine.

At his Concord home today Higgins declared he had been planning to visit a relative in Nova Scotia and a call for aid from Moose River would bring about his immediate departure.

Mary Servoss, blonde of hair and throaty of voice, was telling how she acquired her costume for the role of Ada, Jeeter Lester's dismal wife who says, "It's gittin' so that if I had a stylish dress to be buried in, I'd like to lay me down and die."

"The entire costume cost me just 40 cents," she said. "I bought the dress at a 'good-will' store in Los Angeles. It was pretty awful but not bad enough. So I ripped and patched.

"Still it didn't equal the degradation of Ada's character, so I smeared it with bollymena paste, the nearest thing I could find to Georgia clay. The shoes [illegible] a nickel. They evidently belonged to some flat-footed matriarch of a brood long since perished!"

Hair Lipped Ellie May Is Really Beautiful

Pauline Drake, who plays the role of Ellie May, a grotesque creature doomed to frustration, is actually one of the most beautiful women on the American stage. An example of Rouben Mamoulian's theory of "casting against type" . . . Her hair lip, she explained, is achieved with mercurochrome, absorbent cotton and spirit gum . . .

Good-looking Henry Hull, who becomes the wizened, dust-bitten sire of countless offspring, was telling how he grew a beard to save time in make-up.

"But the beard itched," he said, "so off it came."

Ben Bernie causing a new high in attendance at Levaggi's Flamingo Room, was in a looking-backwards mood when he arrived . . . He had just seen "The Great Ziegfeld" and it brought back memories . . . Ruth Etting, in town for the Maestro's broadcast, was sitting at the table with us in the Flamingo Room. She wore a gold-dotted dinner dress, off-the-face hat and a mink coat. And Mrs. Bernie . . . smartly dressed in black.

"Ruth and I cried on each other's shoulder when we saw the Ziegfeld picture," Bernie said, "and I still get a galumph when I think of it. I learned about show business from Ziggie . . . In all humility I asked him for $2000 a week. Later I was told that if I had asked $7000, I'd have had the job."

When the conversation had progressed from "shoes" to "kings," it finally got around to Boston.

Bernie Even Finds Culture in Boston

"I'll be damned if there ain't something like a bit of culture about Boston," the anti-Winchellian said. "You can see it in the people dancing by and the way they talk. 'Would it be too much trouble to play "Whoo?"' instead of 'Hey, give us "Whoo," will ya?'"

As for politics, it looks to Bernie as if the Republicans would have to nominate Al Smith and the Democrats would have to settle for Hoover.

Eddie Place, enterprising publicity director for the State of Maine, is presenting Brown University with a bear cub. The cub will be photographed tomorrow with mascots of other colleges—the B. U. Terrier, Northeastern Husky, Dartmouth Indian (not in the flesh) and possibly Yale's Bull Dog. Place considered inviting the Army Mule but what with the cost of transportation and the possibility that the mule might break up the party it was decided to do without him.

Leopold Stokowski's engagement in Boston recalled to old-timers this authentic story. When the Philadelphia Symphony played its first concert here in 1904, a Bostonian bought two tickets but was unable to use them. When he tried to return them the next day he was told by L. H. Mudgett, manager at the time, that the money could not be refunded but that the tickets would be honored at the next concert.

The Bostonian arrived promptly at the box office at the next concert . . . which was 10 years later.

Marathon Cutbacks, Or Leaves From The B. A. A.'s Album

Austen Lake

OF ALL EVENTS THAT MAKE the business of sport literature a daffy delight, the one that starts in a bush-bordered country lane at Hopkinton next Monday ranks high on the list. The B. A. A. marathon, or forgotten man's pleasure, when a cavalcade of athletic artisans, of all ages, shapes and condition, go twitching over the landscape for the sake of sick stomach.

It belongs to Boston's tradition, like Dr. Walter Kendall's Wheel-about-the-Hub, Mother Goose's grave, and Louisburg Square. And to one who has followed the semi-psychopathic procession during the post-war years, there are memories. As for example:

1920—Jimmy Henigan trundling along in the lead at Brae-Burn and Arthur Roth sneering "S'long Jimmy" as he passed and labored slowly away. Behind Roth and Henigan the dark-skinned figure of an unknown, Peter Trivoulides, inching up and finally overtaking the scoffer at the Harvard Club to go on and win. Trivoulides, the cafe bus-boy, who won fleeting fame and then faded back into the limbo of half-forgotten heroes. Never heard of again.

* * *

DE MAR'S GOLDEN YEARS

1922, '23, '24—SCRAWNY, sun bitten Clarence DeMar and his rockinghorse lope running with the mechanical precision of an airplane motor, the monotonous perfection of his pace making the long grind seem simple.

1925—Chuck Mellor, wearing heavy mittens on his hands and thicknesses of newspaper under his shirt to offset the bleak April winds and swirl of snow. Mellor stuffing his mouth with eating tobacco until the slack of his cheeks looked like an ulcerated tooth. Mellor plodding along like a tramp tourist, looking curiously at the crowd as he ran, a spectator to his own victory and finishing with contemptuous ease.

1926—Albin S[illegible] 1924 Finnish Olympic champion and popular favorite, jogging shoulder to shoulder with Johnny Miles, a nameless Nova Scotian. And Miles pulling away from the nauseated Finn on the Newton "Heartbreak Hills," to create a new course record and ask "Who was that guy?" meaning Stenroos.

* * *

RAY'S ORDEAL

1928—THE IMMORTAL, Puckish Joie Ray running his first Marathon in the hope of earning a free ride to the Olympics, and slogging along with his shoes soggy with blood and his heels twin, crimson smears. So that, after finishing third, the B. A. A. clubhouse surgeons cut his shoes from his feet, careful lest they lift sections of skin and flesh that adhered to the leather. Ray on crutches, threatened with septic poisoning for three weeks.

1932—Johnny McLeod leading the field at Coolidge Corner by so long a margin that the following runners were not yet in sight. And Johnny, after breaking all records to this point, growing pale from abdomen cramps so that his face was suddenly ash-colored, his eyes bloodshot and his lips slack and drooling as he wobbled to a walk. The rest of the herd going by while Johnny reeled and retched at the curbstone, recovering in time to finish 27th. Paul DeBruyn, the thickset Teuton with a build like a wrestler, being crowned the winner in Exeter street while Johnny was carted off in a delirium.

1934—Dave Komonen, the Finnish mine carpenter, and Johnny Kelley, slender Arlington florist's helper, matching stride for stride like Siamese twins. Komonen handing Johnny cups of water that came from the first-aid auto, and letting the slim youth drink first. Johnny sharing his lemon halves, handed from the sidelines by his four brothers, stationed along the route. The two jogging along and slupping the bitter juices as they ran. And finally Komonen giving a farewell, friendly grin over his shoulder as he turned into Beacon street and began a final spurt that Johnny could not [illegible]

* * *

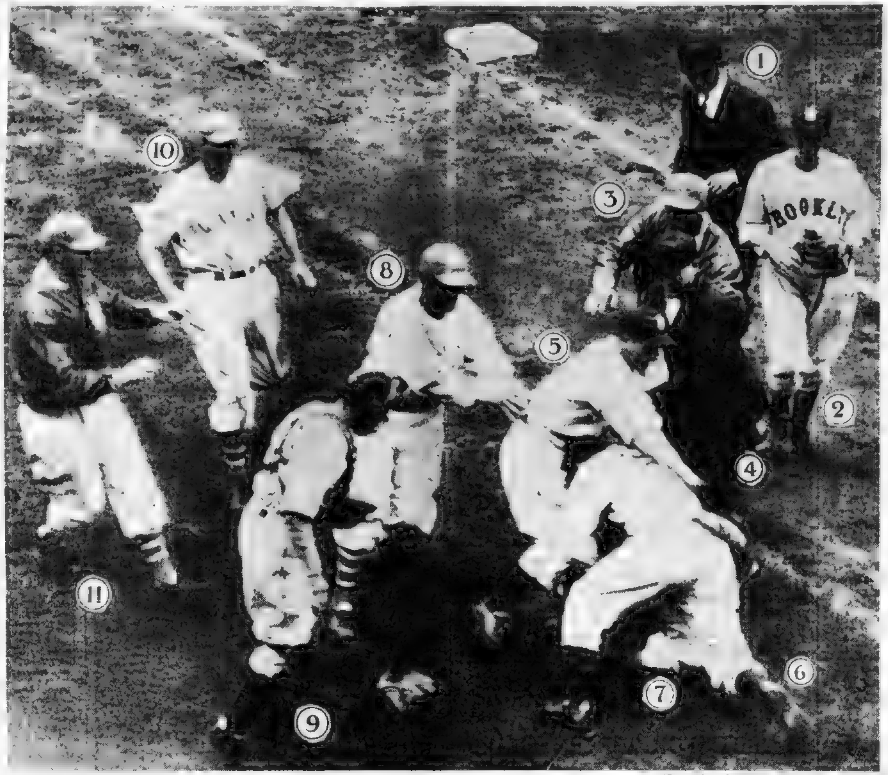
KELLY'S GOOD FRIDAY

1935—Kelley, remembering his last experience, settling down to shadow the blocky Komonen, watching the steady churn of his rump. As the man-to-watch, Komonen being trailed by a swarm of hopefuls, Pawson, DeBruyn, Lermond and Malm. The Finn suffering from gas bubbles at Natick and Johnny moving out after a high-numbered unknown with 175 on his back. Komonen slowing down to a trot, a walk and lifting a ghastly mask as the press cars rolled by. Kelley taking glucose tablets before breasting the Newton hills, fast fuel but dangerous and disordering. Someone on the sidelines sloshing him over with water at Lake street and the last up-hill agony.

The instant of near collapse at Kenmore square when he whoaed up and paused to heave convulsively, fighting the mists in his brain before Pat Dengis could close the quarter mile gap, and going on with a last, leaden lope to spend his dying energies in a wobbly spurt toward the funnel opening in the crowd in Exeter street. Good Friday, the best Friday Johnny had ever known.

1936—The roadside start at Tebeau Farm, when the human pack goes clawing and clattering down the bush-bordered road, to make new history in the poor man's pleasure, another B. A. A. marathon.

Starting the Season Right . . . With Lefts and Rights in Gotham



(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Apparently they take their baseball seriously in New York, or else those Dodgers just hate Mr. Bartell, for the season was hardly two innings old before fisticuffs were part of the opening day's festivities at the Polo Grounds. In the swirl of players, Bartell (7) is down, with Mungo (6) on top of him. Others that featured the battle are Umpire Ballanfant (1), Frey (2), Terry (3), Reardon (4), Hassett (5), Koenig (8), Berres (9), Whitehead (10) and Schumacher (11). It might be added, both Mungo and Bartell were banished for the fracas.

Players Awarded League Passes

Bing Miller, Moe Berg, Lefty Grove, Heinie Manush, Rube Walberg, Oscar Melillo and Jimmy Foxx were the recipients of silver passes for having toiled in the American League for 10 years or more. This pass admits the bearer to any park in the country.

Herk Pennock, for his long and faithful services in the league, was awarded a gold medal. Manager Eddie Collins, while talking baseball, announced the outright purchase of George Dickey from the Little Rock club. No price was given out.

Ryder Enters O'Connell Run

Frank Ryder of the B. A. A., the [illegible] who finished first in the Cathedral run last Saturday has entered the O'Connell race which starts at the Lowell school in Jamaica Plain, at 2:30 p. m. next Saturday.

Race Manager Edgar B. Pitts has announced that the Honorable Gaspar G. Bacon is officially starting the grind, and that Mayor Mansfield is to award the 13 trophies.

'Tiny' Chaplin to Hurl for Bees

By Bill Grimes

Philadelphia, April 16—Through the inability of Ben Cantwell to carry on after his teammates had given him an eight-run lead, Manager Bill McKechnie's plans for pitching assignments had to be tossed into the discards.

He figured to pitch Ray Benge today in the get-away day game. And, when the Bees pushed across nine runs, it appeared as though Cantwell could blow them up there and still win by a comfortable margin.

But, when Johnny Moore arched a home run out onto Broad street in the fifth and three consecutive hits followed McKechnie decided to protect what remained of his eight run advantage and to worry over his pitching selection later.

McKechnie elected to play it safe so he ordered Benge to relieve the Floridian and as a result the Bees came through with a victory and evened up the series.

PUZZLED

Manager Bill was in a quandary, after his Bees had chalked up their 12 to 4 win yesterday until Jim "Tiny" Chaplin, the giant right hand veteran up from Nashville, came to his rescue.

"Say Bill, I wish you'd give me a chance to pitch against the Phils," begged Chaplin.

"I've got to have plenty of work, so I figure that the little workout I had on the mound before the game will just put me right for tomorrow."

So there was nothing else for Manager McKechnie to do but admit Tiny had won the argument.

Jim "Tiny" Chaplin is a fine type of ball player. He has plenty of confidence in his own ability but at the same time he is loud and generous in his ratings of other pitchers.

If he has the good fortune to be accompanied to the hilltop by about 90 per cent of his control, "Tiny" should provide the ways and the means of the Bees taking the odd game.

Danny MacFayden and Ben Cantwell passed up their opportunities of victories through lack of control. MacFayden's lapse was for the duration of only one inning but that was enough for him to toss away the opening game.

Cantwell was in trouble from the start and it was very apparent, innings before he was removed, that he was destined to be the first player back at the hotel.

Manager Jimmy Wilson plans to use "Bucky" Walters, the former Red Sox infielder, who was converted into a pitcher a year ago, this afternoon.

Sharkey Eiland and Ray Mueller left here for Knoxville last night. Mueller was to have returned to Boston with the Bees but Manager McKechnie talked him into going south with Eiland. The Nashville club, to which Eiland was returned is playing Knoxville today.

Gautreau

To Manage Red Sox Farm

Saranac Lake, N. Y., April 16 (AP)—Walter (Doc) Gautreau, former big league player, signed today as manager of the Saranac Lake Red Sox team of the Northern League.

Gautreau was once connected with the Boston Braves of the National League and served for a time as player-manager of the Mont'real Royals of the International League.

The Northern League playing season is scheduled to open June 14.

Sharkey Sails For Yarmouth

On his annual fishing trip, Jack Sharkey, former heavyweight champion, is today on the high seas, on board the steamer Evangeline, en route to Yarmouth, N. S.

Sharkey boarded the steamer at Central wharf last night, accompanied by two friends, Thomas Coolidge, of Chestnut Hill and Harry W. Bridges, of Yarmouth, the latter his host.

The former champion will fish trout and salmon in Cedar lake.

What the Stars Did

By Associated Press

Frankie Frisch, Cards—His homer with Terry Moore on base brought 3-2 victory over Cubs.

Wally Berger, Bees—Hit first homer of the year and drove in two runs in 12—4 victory over Phillies.

Monte Stratton, White Sox—His good work in the pinches and his double, scoring two runs, was vital in victory over the Browns.

BARTELL, Mungo Fined $25 APIECE

New York, April 16 (INS)—Dick Bartell, New York Giant shortstop, and Van Lingle Mungo, Brooklyn pitcher, today drew fines of $25 each from President Ford Frick of the National League for their fist fight yesterday in the second inning of the Giant-Dodger game at the Polo Grounds.

Frick's action followed receipt of a report from the umpires. The fines were the first meted out this season.

The fight started after Mungo had tossed a "bean ball" at Bartell. On the next pitch, Bartell bunted and he and the big pitcher tangled at first base. Both were banished from the game.

Lineup to Remain Same, Says Cronin

Final Test At Fenway With A's

By Joe Cashman

Joseph Edward Cronin, who holds down one of baseball's most lucrative and, at the same time, most difficult posts as manager of our platinum-plated Red Sox, is "sold" on his opening-day lineup.

That's his answer to the many critics who opine he could present a stronger front.

"I thought of every one of the shifts the experts are now suggesting long before they did," asserted the boy pilot as he prepared to lead his "millionaires" into the final game of the series with the Athletics at the Fens this afternoon.

"I figured every possible combination and tried most of them before finally deciding that my best bet would be to field the team I presented in the opener.

"And while we may have been a bit jittery at times in our first game I'm more convinced than ever that I couldn't improve upon my present starting aggregation.

NO CHANGES

"I certainly will make no changes while we're winning, unless injury or illness force my hand, and it will take more than two or three defeats to start me shifting.

"I'm determined to give this lineup every chance to justify my faith in it. I'm confident that it will show steady improvement as the individual members become more accustomed to playing together and keep adding to their knowledge of their mates' peculiarities."

Cronin didn't take kindly to the Wednesday postponement. Not being overburdened with starting pitchers of proven worth, the one thing he is most anxious to avoid is the piling up of doubleheaders.

But, as he looked at the league standing, he was inclined to accept the wash-out philosophically.

For, while showers fell here, Detroit was knocked off in Cleveland, so now our expensive heroes, at the top of the heap, enjoy an edge over all three of their arch-rivals, the Tigers, Indians, and Yanks.

Boss Joe, of course, is desirous of maintaining that advantage by winning this afternoon, but he's doing most of his thinking right now about the next two afternoons, when Fenway flock will be facing its first acid test of the season while playing the Yankees in New York.

Robert Moses Grove, who was to have pitched yesterday, won't work this p. m. He'll be saved to start against the McCarthymen in the "House that Ruth built."

Long John Welch, who was throwing in the bull pen the greater part of the opening game, will be chased to the mound against the Macks.

That means Cronin intends to feed the Yanks strictly on a southpaw diet as either "Fritz" Ostermeuller or "Rube" Walberg, most likely the former, is sure to have the turn following Grove.

"Rick" Ferrell, Boss Joe reveals, will go on starting every game back of the bat. He'll be rested whenever the Sox gain a big lead or drop far behind in a contest.

Billy Werber will continue to play right field in New York, where left field is the sun pasture.

"Heinie Manush isn't bothered by the sun," says the pilot. "He's played left field in New York and in every other park where the sun shines in that sector for the past 13 years and has never had any trouble. He could play right field at Fenway Park as far as the sun is concerned. I have him in left because that's his natural position."

Getting back to today's game, it will go a long way towards settling Johnny Welch's status on the mound staff.

He can gain the rating of regular starter if he gives an impressive performance. If he fails, it's likely to be some time before he is again used except in a relief role.

Dan O'Mahony

RATED On Short END

ROBERT FANS CONFIDENT

By Ringside

"It'll not be a wrestling match—it'll be a landslide," Danno O'Mahony, world's heavyweight champion, told an interested crowd of onlookers as his trainer, Freddie Moran, roughly kneaded his body after a strenuous workout in Buckley's gymnasium today.

The title holder was speaking of tomorrow night's contest with Yvon Robert, spectacular 21-year-old French-Canadian youth, at the Garden, when both Danno's title and $10,000 diamond-studded belt will be at stake.

"I'll knock that fresh Robert kid as stiff as a dress shirt—do you think I would have insisted on winner-take-all if I didn't know I would win?" Danno asked, turning to his trainer.

Mr. Moran, no little awed, gulped "Yes, sir."

And this O'Mahony looks like he can back up his talk with a bristling performance. Always in condition the champion looked in better shape than at any time in his career, as he picked up and tossed John Malmberg, his training mate, at will in a hard workout. He nearly broke Malmberg's bones with the Irish Whip. He punished him with other holds.

Jack McGrath, manager of the champion, stood on the sidelines not missing a single move made by Danno. The latter's work made McGrath smile.

"That kid's right," McGrath said. "Robert will not beat him—neither will anybody else for a long while to come. I had been working him too hard and all he needed was the rest I gave him last week. I didn't want this match, not that I feared Robert. I simply didn't want to have a hand in his making any money, after the way he has acted. However, Danno over-ruled me, insisted on taking the match and at winner-take-all."

O'Mahony must be confident. He would have talked Bowser into a $10,000 guarantee, like he received in his other match with Robert, and he could have had the champion's 37½ per cent. Instead he chose to risk taking 60 per cent of the entire receipts, which should be $25,000 or better, judging from the early sale, or to take absolutely nothing.

But, so far as that, Robert is just as confident. He jumped at the chance of taking the match on a winner-take-all basis. If he should triumph, and fans will bet you 7 to 5 that he will, he'll get the biggest purse he has received since he has been scrambling for old calories and proteins and threw away his title.

In the other match Robert received 12½ per cent of $26,780, which is $3,347.50 plus $500 for training expenses. Working under the same arrangement he would receive just as much this time if it wasn't for the winner-take-all arrangement, so the young man must figure he knows what he is doing.

FOXX WRITES

Time to Start Home Run Race

Senators May Be Surprise

By JIMMY FOXX

Too many home runs are being hit to satisfy me. More than a dozen have already been bashed out and my name isn't on the honor roll. A single, double and triple, but no round-tripper.

I'm aiming to make the list in the final game with the Athletics this afternoon, if the weather permits play.

For I've learned from experience that it's very bad on the nerves to fall very far behind in the race.

Last season I dropped behind Hank Greenberg in the early stages and I didn't care a bit for the sensations I experienced until I finally caught up with the Tiger slugger going down the home stretch.

I hope this year to be able to follow the easier way of never dropping from within hailing distance of the leader.

Jimmy Foxx

TWIN BATTLE

I'll have two battles on my hand this season. I'll have to struggle not only to be the home run king of the American League but also of Boston.

Wally Berger of the Bees is a most formidable foe. He led the National League in circuit drives last season. He's leading me now, having hit his first 1936 homer in Philadelphia yesterday.

I hope he forces me to a new home run record to beat him out.

We hated to be forced to loaf yesterday. We were confident that "Lefty" Grove would lead us to our second straight victory over the A's. But happenings elsewhere around the circuit, where the sun was shining, took a lot of the sting out of our disappointment.

The world's champion Tigers got a licking from the Indians and fell out of their top tie with us. And the Yankees took it on the chin from the Senators for the second day running, which means we'll be leading the McCarthymen when we open our road campaign in New York tomorrow, regardless of what happens this afternoon.

The first game or two of a race of course mean next to nothing when it comes to estimating the real strength of any team, but I can't help but being impressed over the fight shown by the Senators against the Yanks.

SHOW PROMISE

"Bucky" Harris' boys seemed doomed to defeat several times in both contests, but they hung in there gamely and finally emerged victorious.

The Nats showed a lot of promise in the South. They're young, fast and aggressive. They don't figure to cut much ice in the flag race, but they could easily become the surprise club of the season.

Boston fans will see this Washington club for the first time next Monday, when it comes here to open a four-game series.

Our followers, incidentally, may have to wait until that engagement to get their season's first peek at Grove.

"Lefty" was due to work yesterday, but since rain interfered it is quite possible that our southpaw ace will be saved to open against the Yanks in New York tomorrow.

If we can hit as well as we did in the opener, we needn't care who pitches this afternoon or any other for that matter.

It so happens, though, that we have good pitching as well as a powerful punch as will be proved after Grove, Walberg, Ostermueller, Welch, Wilson and Cascarella [illegible] a chance to display their wares.

John Is No 'Plodder'

Marathon Is Speed Event

KELLEY IRATE AT TERM

By Will Connell

There's joy in Johnny Kelley's heart as he wakes to Wednesday morning, weeping gray skies, and a chill wind blowing clouds of mist through Arlington.

For cold, dark days of spring are perfect weather for the flimsy-clad men who measure off miles with effortless Marathon stride.

So Johnny is a very happy lad as he [illegible] before 7 o'clock and [illegible] a whole grapefruit, two shredded wheat biscuits with sugar and cream, three slices of toast, two soft boiled eggs and one cup of coffee. A small cup, for John [illegible] or a little coffee and [illegible] round out a meal.

FUELLING

A half day's work eats up the [illegible] but he's free then and hurries home to Mother Bertha Kelley and lunch carefully cooked [illegible]. There's a good sized section of steak, two boiled potatoes, a saucer of green peas and [illegible] tomatoes, graham bread, ten graham crackers, a fruit salad dessert and a banana to take the final edge from his appetite.

Nothing to do for a couple of hours, so Johnny takes care of his considerable correspondence and gets the latest scrap book up to date. He has 10 of these books filled with clippings and pictures of his own races and stories about noted foot racers in all parts of the world.

"I guess it's time for my mid-week workout," Kelley remarks. And, a few minutes later, he's off for an easy six mile stretch.

Clad in old long trousers, a shirt and light sweater and wearing the same shoes he carried to victory in last year's B. A. A. run, Johnny moves along at a rate that would paralyze the average runner. But it's a mere soft workout to him.

The term plodders, by the way, pleases Johnny not a bit.

"When anyone is running a number of miles and averaging five minutes and a half per mile or close to that," Johnny states, "he is striding, racing, and not shuffling as so many people believe. Try to keep up with a first class distance runner some day, for just a short distance, if you don't agree."

Dinner time arrives. Beef at noon means fish at dinner for Johnny, who insists on balancing his diet. So there's boiled salmon with egg sauce, two baked potatoes, some spinach and three slices of white bread with a moderate amount of butter. One triangle of home-made pie and a few graham crackers complete the meal.

Tonight it's stormy, so Johnny rides to the home of his trainer, Argus MacDonald, for a condition check-up and rubdown to soothe his nerves. He rides home, lounges a bit and sips one cup of cocoa. Curtains then for a sleepy [illegible] road roamer.

X-9ers Set for Hunt

By Jack Conway

SPEAKING of news: If Jimmy McLarnin [illegible] from Tony Canzoneri in their ten-round [illegible] in the New York Garden on May 8, he will demand a bout with Barney Ross for the world's welterweight championship.

It [illegible] McLarnin 147 [illegible] 135 [illegible] and world's lightweight champion [illegible] are [illegible] the [illegible] but Canzoneri has kept [illegible] while McLarnin has permitted [illegible] ring rust to gather.

In his recent bouts Canzoneri has displayed tireless fighting power and his usually excellent boxing.

Harvard is going in for rugby in a large way this season. Head Coach Cabot tells me the English game has caught on in New York, and that it will also go over big here. So the 1000 Jefferson Club bike [illegible] work [illegible] [illegible] watches, medals and [illegible] other prizes which total [illegible] awards.

Most of the prizes will be on display tonight [illegible] Cambridge. The score and more of the trophies will be there, many of the Gruens and enough of the others to give a very fair estimate of the entire fine collection.

What makes this race all the more colorful and interesting is the fact that with few exceptions, the competing youngsters have never before had a crack at winning prizes, particularly any as fine as these.

Most of the Jefferson Club field will be the neighborhood boys, racing each other around the block. But this time they will be racing under ideal conditions without the usual attendant danger.

Cards are now in the mails to all riders. Full instructions are enclosed. Competitors should follow them closely.

Bankroll Game Prizes Offered

Cash and season tickets to New England race tracks!

That's the offer of Miss Ann Marsters, girl handicapper, whose amazing [illegible] record has startled veteran turf experts.

To the person guessing nearest the amount of her betting bankroll on May 16 will go $100 in cash and season passes to Rockingham, Narragansett and Suffolk Downs. Next best guessers will receive a total of 15 season passes.

It's a fascinating game and there are no strings or catches. Miss Marsters started with [illegible] donated by Walter O'Hara. How much will she have May 16? Entries close May 4.

Bowling Tourneys in Offing

By Ed Cogswell

Bowlers will be on their metal until into May for the tournaments already listed.

First on the schedule is the annual Lynn Item event for candlepins, April 20-May 2, at the 20th Century Alleys, Lynn.

For the women experts singles, doubles and mixed doubles are offered with the same classes for men. Then there is an open event for the North Shore championship.

Over in Cambridge will be decided the second annual University candlepin tournament, on May 4-8, at the Central Alleys, with a complete list of classes for both the men and women. Each event is for five strings.

The duck pin bowlers are priming themselves for the annual New England tournament at the Casino Alleys, Providence. This takes place the first weeks in May. Many of the Greater Boston candlepin aces intend tackling the ducks for cash, trophies and glory.

BEST BET—THRUSTER, SEVENTH RACE

Havre de Grace, Md., April 16.—Miss E. Miller's Thruster, on the strength of Monday's easy victory, is accorded a standout in preference over indifferent platers of $1250 top and bottom variety in the one mile and a sixteenth of the seventh stanza here today.

FIRST RACE

String along with BENDER FIRST in this wide-open affair. LIGHT BROOK holds some class and comes strongly recommended by the clockers.

SECOND RACE

SHEPHERD BOY, on Florida form, shapes up vastly superior to this indifferent field. CHILIAD, third to Distracting at Bowie, figures next best on the strength of that most recent endeavor.

THIRD RACE

Walter M. Jeffords' KEARSARGE, a Man o' War-Baton colt, eligible for the Preakness and other important classics, has only to run back to brilliant morning trials in order to graduate from the maiden ranks. SNOW FOX was a maiden above the ordinary run last season.

FOURTH RACE

BROWN TWIG, seasoned by a successful Florida campaign, should experience little difficulty in handling this field, many of which have been away from the races since last fall. DANCING DOLL, another successful Florida racer, is strictly the danger.

FIFTH RACE

Just can't pass up BUCK LANGHORNE in this affair. ONE CHANCE, always dangerous in this sort of company, should offer the contention.

SIXTH RACE

ABBOT'S LAST most recent endeavor should be disregarded. The Vanderbilt colorbearer showed a complete disliking for the heavy footing that day. OVERSTIMULATE, second to Ross at Bowie, figures close up on that recent race.

SEVENTH RACE

THRUSTER is meeting little more than he drubbed so easily on opening day.

Indian Broom to Sweep in Narragansett Special

Horsemen Plan for Opening Day

By Bob Ahearn

Narragansett Park, April 16—King Horse will be making his 1936 New England debut before a hungry throng at Walter O'Hara's racing strip within two weeks, Saturday, May 2 to be exact.

Already there are nearly 1000 horses on the grounds, all waiting for some one to bet on them. Latest to arrive was the string of Danny Shea, Boston sportsman.

Shea unloaded eight head at Gansett including [illegible] Bowie winners Coming Back and Currants. Others in the Shea stable are Fair Scout, Darwack, Keene, Jack Martha H. and two new acquisitions.

Johnny Melanson, Tony Coucci, H. H. Brown and C. B. Cushman were others to arrive with their racing strings. Brown showed up with ten bangtails, including the good performers, Swamp Angel, Happy Helen, Col. Bixer, Zulu Lal, and Playful Martha.

* * *

Winner of the Marchbank Handicap at Tanforan in world record time, Maj. Austen C. Taylor's Indian Broom, conqueror of the mighty Top Row, is announced as an entrant for the Narragansett Special, one of the East's leading turf events.

Indian Broom campaigned at the local oval last season in the colors of the Brookmeade Stable of Mrs. Isabelle Dodge Sloan.

Major Taylor, Vancouver, B. C., sportsman, purchased Indian Broom and Special Agent from the Brookmeade Stable at private terms this winter.

Both Indian Broom and Special Agent were closing date entries for the Narragansett Special.

* * *

Plenty of activity can be seen in the early hours here. The influx of horse flesh is high and indications point to a banner spring session.

Harry I. Day, inventor and director of the electric eye is here, ready to swing into action. The tower structure is complete and the photographic and timing apparatus is being installed and adjusted by Day's crew of experts.

BANKROLL IS NOW $532.70. DAY'S PLAY $10.

It was a winning day yesterday our twelfth as New England's only girl handicapper. MOWER, a first time starter, and POSTAGE DUE were our winning choices.

MOWER paid the handsome price of 5 to 1 at Jamaica's opening day. This bangtail was overlooked by the majority of the handicappers, being his first trip postward.

DUTCH UNCLE was beaten by only a whisker, while WAFEN JR. ran third. TINTAGEL ran out of the money. We received $15.60 for a $10 play on our choices and the bankroll went up to $532.70.

We're expecting a price on KEARSARGE in the third at Havre. It's $2 to win. ABBOT'S LAST in the sixth at Maryland and CRYSTAL PRINCE in the fifth at Jamaica appear safe wagers.

My late specials for this afternoon are THRUSTER in the seventh at Havre De Grace and NEAP in the fourth at Jamaica.

(At the suggestion of Walter O'Hara, Miss Marsters has set out to determine that conservative bets can result in satisfactory profits, or at worst, small losses. Walter O'Hara, Narragansett Park owner, provided the capital with a $1000 gift. Half was turned over to the Boston Evening American Christmas Fund immediately. The remainder will be similarly handled at the end of the experiment. This is the thirteenth day of the experiment.)

Hunt Winners in Baseball Contest

Fourteen thousand pieces of mail were received by the Boston Evening American contest editor in response to the baseball contest in which contestants were to give the correct starting lineup of the Boston Red Sox and the correct number of runs, hits and errors that team made in their opener at Fenway Park. Here, girl contest experts are delving into the work of finding the correct, or nearest correct answers. Five hundred winners will be selected, and each will receive two tickets to see the Red Sox play any day except Saturdays, Sundays or holidays.

Fight Results

Providence—Lou Ambers, 137, New York, knocked out Buster Brown, 140, Baltimore, in one round. Pat O'Brien, 150, Boston, knocked out Eddie Forte, 151, Providence, in the first round.

Philadelphia—Leroy Haynes, 200, Philadelphia, knocked out Natie Brown, 212, Washington, in two rounds.

New York—Pedro Montanez, 134½, Puerto Rico, knocked out Lou Jallos, 138½, Cleveland, in seventh round.

Milwaukee—George Black, 160½, Milwaukee, stopped Frankie Misko, 156½, Grand Rapids, Mich. (5).

St. Louis—Joe Ghnouly, 132, St. Louis, outpointed Ray Sharkey, 134, Cleveland (8).

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Buyer of Death

A Chelsea Man's Story of Events That Followed a Want-Ad

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Here's another case where Enterprise drags down the dough. It's a story from MELVIN COHEN, of 86 Orange street, Chelsea, and he tells of an adventure his brother Aaron had on the first day of August, 1930. Aaron had one of the most amazing and most terrifying experiences I've ever heard or read of, and he acquitted himself mighty creditably in a set of trying circumstances.

FLOYD GIBBONS

I'd like to send the well-known ten buck check to Aaron, for he certainly earned it when he went through that adventure. If he'd sent the yarn in himself, I would have. But as matters stand, I've got to award the prize to Melvin, who DID send it in. And along with the ten spot go my personal congratulations to Mel as a guy who knows an opportunity when he sees it.

We can forget about M[illegible], for the rest of the yarn is Aaron's [illegible]. [illegible] owned a variety store in Revere, Mass., and in it was a postal sub-station. And while I hate to say anything detrimental to our old reliable U. S. [illegible] it was that sub-station that caused all the [illegible].

About the time [illegible] begins, Aaron had decided to sell his store and [illegible] announcing that fact. The next [illegible] and that same afternoon [illegible] came in to look the place over.

The man spent [illegible] looking around. He listened to Aaron's [illegible] said he would buy the store if [illegible] postal sub-station went with it.

Well [illegible] that only the postal authorities could decide. Aaron [illegible] he'd have to go to the Boston Post Office to find out whether they would approve the change in management. The man left. In a few hours he came back. The deal, he told Aaron, had been okayed.

While they were still talking the telephone rang. A man on the wire stated he was a postal inspector, and told Aaron that if he were going to sell his store he would have to bring all his post office equipment to Boston to be checked before he turned it over to the new owner.

That sounded [illegible] to Aaron. He gathered up his stock of stamps and money-order blanks [illegible] stamps and what [illegible] and started to carry them out to his car.

But there his prospective buyer intervened. "Put them in my car," he said. "I've got to go into town. I'll drive you in and take you back."

Aaron didn't see anything wrong with that. He got into the other fellow's car. There was another man in it, sitting behind the wheel.

They drove a short distance until they came to a lonely spot near the old Revere Cycle Track and then the next thing Aaron knew he was [illegible] into the muzzle of a revolver.

Then followed the most exciting, most terrifying time of Aaron's whole life. They put handcuffs on him, plastered adhesive tape over his mouth [illegible] threw him into the rear of the car. He hadn't the [illegible] idea what those men wanted, but he soon found out.

IT WAS THAT BOOK OF MONEY-ORDER BLANKS THAT WAS PART OF HIS POSTAL EQUIPMENT.

Properly filled out, they were worth thousands of dollars.

Bound, gagged, and covered with a blanket, Aaron rode for what seemed miles. At length they stopped the car at another lonely spot and tried to make him sign the blanks.

Aaron refused, but that didn't bother the two crooks. They forged signatures on them, using Aaron's own rubber stamps and paraphernalia to make them look authentic.

Then they began driving from town to town and from city to city, cashing the blanks at post offices.

All that time Aaron rode with them, a prisoner in the back seat. The crooks didn't dare let him go, for that would mean an alarm and a [illegible] all money-order [illegible]. AND GRADUALLY, IT DAWNED ON AARON THAT THEY DIDN'T MEAN TO LET HIM GO AT ALL!

He [illegible] from [illegible] conversation [illegible] he over[illegible] began to [illegible] certain [illegible] that car alive.

The [illegible] spot along the [illegible] and let the world believe Aaron HIMSELF had [illegible] those money-order blanks, collected the money and ran away.

Aaron was frantic. He began working his facial muscles, trying to loosen the adhesive tape that covered his mouth. At length, he got it off, just as the car pulled up before the post office in Brookline. Aaron waited until one of the bandits had gone inside to cash another money order. THEN HE ACTED.

Rising to his feet—yelling for help at the top of his lungs—he struck with his manacled hands at the man remaining in the front seat.

He caught the crook unawares, hit him a stunning blow with the steel cuffs that encircled his wrists. The man struggled, fought back in a dazed sort of way, but a crowd gathered swiftly and came to Aaron's aid.

Then a policeman appeared on the scene and took the crook in charge, while others went after his companion.

They caught the second crook later, and Aaron got a hundred dollar reward from the government for the part he played in their arrest and conviction, and that's not at all bad for a day's work obtained through a want-ad. What I mean, boys and girls, IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

It pays to send me your true adventure stories, too, by golly. You can get ten bucks for as many minutes work—and a shot at the big monthly prize in the bargain. SO SEND IN THOSE YARNS.

Tomorrow, we'll hear another thrilling yarn. Will it be yours?

Floyd Gibbons will pay good money for good TRUE adventure stories. Hundreds of people in Boston and nearby towns have received ten-dollar and hundred-dollar bills for their yarns, and there's no reason why you can't do the same, for, as Floyd says, everybody has had at least one adventure. Archie Levesque of 9 Blackwell street, Montpelier, Vt., won a hundred and ten dollars for the story of his life's biggest moment, and you can do the same. For further details, see the box at the right side of this page.

Waring Returns To Met

Fred Waring and His Pennsylvanians with a new musical revue featuring novelty lighting, [illegible] stage effects along with [illegible] popular music as the [illegible] used for the Metropolitan stage show starting tomorrow. On the screen Margaret Sullavan's [illegible] starring picture, "The Moon's Our Home," will be [illegible].

The famous Waring band will offer [illegible] presentation, [illegible] appearance here. Waring has added several [illegible] to his production. Fea[illegible] violin player whose [illegible] has proved popular on the Ford Radio Program with the Pennsylvanians will make her [illegible] debut. Charles Newman, 20-year-old harmonica artist, is also a newcomer.

[illegible] and Rosemary Lane, Johnny Davis, Stella and the Fellas, Gene Conklin, Scotty Bates, Tubby Hanlon, the Waring Glee Club, [illegible] Cockerill, The MacFarland Twins and many others will be present with the Waring organization at the Metropolitan. Priscilla Lane will do her first dancing here in addition to the harmony singing with Rosemary.

"The Moon's Our Home" is a film based on the adventures of a [illegible] movie actress who is [illegible] only by her grandmother. Miss Sullavan has this [illegible] role and Henry Fonda is seen in a featured part, [illegible] a world famous author [illegible]. These two meet and fall desperately in love without knowing each other's identities, having previously spoken of each other in disparaging fashion.

Charles Butterworth, Henrietta Crosman and Beulah Bondi are supporting members of the cast of "The Moon's Our Home." This romantic comedy was taken from a novel by Faith Baldwin and its dialogue was written by Dorothy Parker and Alan Campbell.

A New Screen Find

Kay Linaker shows sterling screen possibilities in "Road Gang," the feature picture which came to the Paramount and Fenway screens today. It is a stirring answer to the crime wave problem.

Harding Film at Keith's

Adapted from Rita Weiman's story of the same name which appeared in Cosmopolitan Magazine, "The Witness Chair," starring Ann Harding, will take the screen of Keith's Memorial Theater following a special preview showing tonight.

Playing opposite the star in a romantic role is Walter Abel, who, it will be remembered, competed unsuccessfully for Miss Harding's favor with Herbert Marshall in "The Lady Consents."

The suspense of "The Witness Chair" arises from the plight of Miss Harding, who is forced to let Mr. Abel stand trial for a crime she committed. A courtroom confession veers the peril of the situation to Miss Harding.

RKO Radio, producer of the film, has given Miss Harding an excellent supporting cast. Frances Sage, young importee from Broadway, makes her screen debut in "The Witness Chair." Moroni Olsen, Douglas Dumbrille, Margaret Hamilton, Maxine Jennings and Murray Kinnell are in the cast.

LEWIS HANEY ON DEPRESSION

U. S. Recovery MIXED AND IRREGULAR In Character

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, April 16—A Long Island reader asks, "Is this country still suffering from depression? If not, would you consider these times normal?"

It can be said at once that (1) There is now no such depression as existed in 1932 and early 1933, that (2) there has been much "recovery" in some respects, but that (3) times are certainly not normal in any sense of that word.

• • •

Speaking broadly, one can say that almost any average of the activities in various lines of industry and business shows an increase of about 50 per cent from the low levels of 1932-33. The same measurements, however, show a present average level which is more than 25 per cent below the general level of 1926-29, and is not a great deal above the general level of 1921—a year which we associate with depression.

The fact is that between 1929 and 1933 we had one of the largest declines in business activity on record. This carried us to depths so low in comparison with the ten preceding years, that the large amount of expansion since 1932 still leaves us at a relatively low average level.

For example, the recovery from 1921 to 1923 brought an expansion in industrial and business activity of about 48 per cent. Since the low of 1932-33, we have had greater expansion than that, but we are still averaging only about the 1921 level.

In number of unemployed persons, in building activity, and in iron and steel production, one would have to say that depression still reigns. Unfortunately, the New Deal "relievers" won't find out how many unemployed there are, but most estimates run around the enormous figure of 10,000,000. Building activity is lower than in 1921, and probably much less than half of normal. Steel production is only about 66 per cent of capacity.

On the other hand, new high records have been made in output of electric refrigerators, radios, cigarettes, gasoline, and rayon, while the output of automobiles and vacuum cleaners has been the highest since 1929. Mail order sales have boomed.

• • •

The outstanding fact about our "recovery" is its mixed and irregular character, and this is due to the fact that it has been so artificial and so influenced by inflationary stimulants. We have had a series of veritable booms in many consumer goods, while the capital-goods industries have remained depressed.

I would say that this country is suffering from depression in some lines, and is suffering from artificial booms in other lines.

Instead of allowing prices to be the result of demand and supply conditions, and treating money as a means of measuring prices, we have tried to regulate prices, and to use money as a means of manipulating prices.

Instead of correcting the maladjustments and liquidating the over-extended credit of 1929, the Roosevelt administration has sought to do for us the same things we were doing ourselves in that dreadful boom period.

Thus the New Dealers have borrowed and spent. They have broken the public debt record. They have borrowed by seizing control of our billions of government checks around so that nearly one-fifth of the people are living off the government. After buying automobiles, gasoline, cigarettes, electric refrigerators, etc., these checks come back to the banks as deposits. Thus as the public debt has grown, bank deposits have grown, and attained boom proportions.

• • •

New investment in productive enterprise is almost at a standstill.

We may have further inflationary expansion, but we cannot have real recovery or normal business as long as our nation is run by a man who sneeringly dismisses as "panaceas" our demands for a sounder monetary system and orderly federal finance.

WARREN Bros. Payment LIKELY

DEFINITE DATE UNKNOWN

An interest payment on Warren Brothers 5½ per cent notes of 1937 and the 6 per cent debentures of 1941 is anticipated to be made by the company from the proceeds of a partial liquidation of Six Companies, Inc., the Boulder Dam contract of that company having been accepted by the United States.

A definite date of payment or its amount cannot now be stated, it was announced by Ralph Warren, treasurer of the company today.

A sufficient number of the bonds and notes have been deposited to make effective the plan for deferment of interest and sinking fund payments, Mr. Warren announced, but the company requests that other holders of the securities will also deposit them so as to strengthen the company's position in its negotiations in connection with the payment of its $13,000,000 claim against the Cuban government.

• • •

In making this request, Mr. Warren pointed out that several of the largest investment services in the country have consistently advised such deposits.

Deposits have been made by 92 national and state banking institutions and 102 trust estates. Since the proposal of the plan the price of the debentures has more than doubled, demonstrating the confidence of holders that the plan will work out beneficially.

Deposit certificates for debentures are selling recently within a fraction of a point of the debentures and recently have sold higher. Due to the dwindling supply of undeposited bonds, trading in the certificates of deposit is becoming relatively greater.

The company, Mr. Warren said, has not traded in these securities nor has it paid or offered commissions in order to obtain deposits of bonds or notes. There has been no opposition to the plan.

• • •

Attendance a tthe stockholders' meeting April 14 was more than double that of the 1935 meeting despite considerably less effort to obtain proxies. President Charles R. Gow asked for and answered a number of questions from stockholders. Satisfaction was expressed with the policies of the management.

MAINE Central OUTLOOK

CONDITIONS STUDIED

Portland, Me., April 16—The Maine Central Railroad is far more concerned regarding effects on its future financial condition from legislation pending in Washington than it is with the damage caused by the recent flood, President E. S. French told stockholders at the annual meeting of the road here.

"I see no reason why the Maine Central can't take the flood in its stride and rehabilitate its railroad," said President French.

"When we are done with the repairs we will have a better railroad than before. Together with all those concerned in the management of your company, I feel that we will have a satisfactory record of earnings in 1936 and thereafter.

"I am a great deal more concerned with legislation pending in Washington and its effect on the earnings of the Maine Central Railroad than I am with the flood. There are a lot of uncertainties being debated in Washington.

"There is the passenger fare matter. No one can predict what effect that will have on our earnings; the emergency charge on freight will expire June 30. We have joined with the other railroads in seeking an extension, but no one knows the result of that. There is the matter of pensions now before the Supreme Court. And the Guffey coal bill, if that is held constitutional, will cost us additional money for our fuel."

"The Pettingill bill has passed the House and is now in the hands of the interstate commerce committee of the Senate. If that bill passes, it will be very helpful to our earnings.

"The tax situation is unpredictable. It may be good or bad from our point of view.

"Generally, there are eight or nine political factors and uncertainties that make it difficult to predict the earnings for the next year. However, I think we can congratulate ourselves on the outcome of the recent refinancing and look to the future with confidence."

The meeting, at which 84,310 shares of outstanding stock were represented, was entirely unanimous and no dissenting voice was raised. Stockholders re-elected the present board of directors.

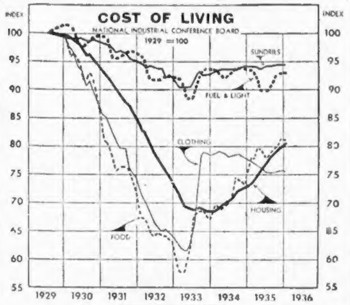
NEWSPRINT Output Higher

With United States newsprint mills showing the second successive monthly increase in output after a long series of declines, Canadian newsprint mills continued to turn out record tonnages of the paper in March and output for mills in both countries for the first three months of 1936 topped that for any similar period with the exception of 1928, 1929 and 1930, according to the Newsprint Service Bureau.

Canadian production during March was 243,900 tons, against 205,682 tons in March last year, an increase of 18.6 per cent.

PAN-AMERICAN

Cost of Living Rises



Everybody knows that the cost of living has increased since 1933. The biggest increases have been in clothing, housing and food. Fuel and light and "sundries" have gained only slightly.

The accompanying chart indicates that various items which go to make up a large part of the cost of living are now back to their 1931 level.

The food index is at its highest level since the beginning of 1931. Housing today costs more than at any time since 1932.

Clothing jumped sharply in 1933 and since has gone down somewhat.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, April 16 — American Telephone & Telegraph Company takes the honors for being the first company to meet the request of the New York Stock Exchange to publish monthly earnings report on a 12-months' basis with comparisons for the preceding 12 months.

There has been some opposition to the introduction of this practice on the part of companies with securities listed on the Big Board.

This has been based mainly on the idea that the additional accounting necessary for such reports would be too burdensome. However, A. T. & T. is one of the foremost corporate organizations of the whole world with its interests scattered over the nation and extending to various other countries. Obviously, the additional accounting work entailed is by no means light. Advocates of this system contend there can be no question that the monthly reports—instead of quarterly and annual statements—afford the investor a more accurate idea of the existing situation in a company, and therefore permit the prices of securities to reflect conditions promptly.

Conference Here on Tire Price Denied

Rumors accompanying the strength of rubber stocks that a conference to bring all factors into agreement on higher tire prices had recently been held in this city where emphatically denied yesterday by an official of the Rubber Manufacturers Association. Reports that tire prices would be revised upward this spring have been current for several weeks but no decisive move has taken place in this direction thus far.

2-Year Stock Rise Double Trade Gain

TRADERS who profess to be mystified by the abrupt decline in stock prices this week may find a comparison of the percentage rise in the market value of all listed shares the last two years with the extent of the recovery in various industrial indices somewhat illuminating. All listed shares have appreciated 41 per cent in value since the beginning of spring in 1934. Government figures for the latest date available compared with the corresponding figures two years ago show industrial production has risen 26 per cent; contraction contracts 24 per cent; factory employment 14 per cent; factory payrolls 33 per cent, and national bank deposits 41 per cent. The natural conclusion is that the market has discounted twice the actual recovery in general business.

Central Financial Results Better

New York Central railroad's financial showing improved substantially in February, the road reporting net loss of $548,875, against net loss of $1,227,323 in February, 1935. There are evidences that the improvement over a year ago will continue, for the road's loadings are currently running about 15 per cent ahead of 1935. The road sustained only $750,000 damage from the recent floods, which was small in comparison with the $12,500,000 damage to Pennsylvania railroad's tracks and plant. A favorable factor in the Central picture is that the road's interest charges are being reduced around $476,000 annually by refunding of $62,900,000 of bank loans, on which charges were 4 per cent, with securities bearing a lower interest rate. The road for the first two 1935 months had net loss of $1,082,116, against net loss of $1,904,985 in the like 1935 period. The road earned two cents a share on common stock in the full year 1935, against a deficit of $1.54 in 1934.

Allied Kid

Allied Kid Company declared regular quarterly dividends of $1.62½ per share on preferred stock and 12½ cents each on Class A and common stock, all payable May 1 to stock of record April 23.

AGREEMENT Advocated As Peace Measure

Washington, April 16 (INS) — A Pan-American agreement to encourage the reduction of trade barriers among the American nations was advocated by the United States government today as a means of preserving peace on this hemisphere.

A general understanding among all the nations of the Americas to protect their neutrality in event of war either abroad or on this continent also was proposed.

These proposals were put forward publicly by Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles, in charge of the plans for Pan-American peace conference at Buenos Aires this summer. They will form the chief suggestions the United States will propose at the conference.

The proposed economic agreement may take the form of a joint endorsement by the Latin republics of American Secretary of State Hull's program for the restoration of trade through the reduction of trade barriers.

This government maintains the view that one of the best means to aid the preservation of peace on this hemisphere would be through a strengthening of bonds of economic unity by "economic disarmament."

Anaconda Elects New Directors

Butte, Mont., April 16 (INS)—J. H. Perkins and William C. Potter were directors today of the Anaconda Copper Company. They were elected to the board at the annual stockholders' meeting held at Anaconda, Mont., yesterday.

Perkins is chairman of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York and Potter is chairman of the National City Bank.

Perkins, Potter and J. R. Hobbins were chosen for three-year terms on the board.

Hobbins, vice-president of the Anaconda company, was chairman of the meeting, with K. B. Frazer acting as secretary.

Reports submitted at the meeting disclosed that there were 111,478 stockholders of the company on record.

Wall St. Hears

New York, April 16 (INS)—That Nash Motors (NSS) in the quarter ending May 31 will better the 3 cents a share earned in the previous period.

That earnings of Sparks-Withington (SKW) for the year ending June 30 will be between 15 and 20 cents a share.

That somewhat larger dividends by Allied Chemical (ACD) are expected later in the year.

That Crosley Radio (CR) in the first quarter had profits equal to approximately 60 cents a share.

DELAY Foreign Debt FIGURE

PUBLIC WILL BE SHOCKED

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

New York, April 16—The inordinate delay in making public the balance of international payments of the United States for 1935 is postponing the public shock which the figures will entail.

The equivalent British preliminary figures for 1935 became available on February 21 last.

It is understood that the American figures will be ready next week. Bookkeeping data becomes of increasing usefulness in the formulation of policy when made available promptly, instead of belatedly.

When allowance is made for huge imports of gold and silver, the net deficit of the United States in respect to goods, services and precious metals will be strikingly larger than for the previous year. For that year, George N. Peek, using preliminary data, placed the deficit at $970,000,000. The League of Nations in their recent study of balances of payments substantially confirms the Peek interpretation, showing a deficit of $837,000,000.

The difference is due to the fact that the League used subsequent corrected figures and treated importations of paper currency differently as a capital transaction.

Incidentally, though Mr. Peek is in retirement and though the office of foreign trade advisor has been abolished, his bookkeeping innovations happily are to be continued.

Not only will the practice of keeping satisfactory books in respect to the economic position of the United States vis-a-vis the rest of the world as a whole, but also books will be kept in respect to economic relations of the United States with other nations country by country. This important bookkeeping now centers in the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

No better exposition of the value of national bookkeeping has been made than the one presented by Dr. Alexander V. Dye, director of the bureau, at the recent hearing before the subcommittee of the House committee on appropriations in connection with the department of commerce appropriation bill for 1937. Dr. Dye recently returned from field work in Argentine, and he showed how bookkeeping helped in understanding relations with the Argentine.

"The balance-of-payments work which is being carried on by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce is important because it is really the keeping of books on a national scale, with other nations."

Dr. Dye then related the Argentine experience, pointing out that that country rations the use of foreign exchange. Out of the quota of exchange available for Americans at the official rate, $25,000,000 was deducted to be used for the payment of interest and amortization of loans which the Argentine government had floated in the United States.

"However," Dr. Dye explained, "we pointed out to the Argentine treasury department that there was no proof that all these dollar bonds were held in the United States, as there had been rumors that some of the bonds had been repatriated or had been passed into the hands of other nationals.

"Their reply essentially was that if we could prove that these dollars for use in the payment of coupons on the bonds did not actually go to the United States but elsewhere, they would release to us a corresponding amount of exchange at the official rate.

"It is the purpose of the balance of payments, therefore, to show exactly how our accounts stand with other nations."

CURB PRICE Tone Steady

New York, April 16 (AP)—A steady tone was displayed by the curb market today with gains of 1 to 2 points in a number of inactive specialties the principal feature of trading.

Montgomery Ward "A," Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph, New Jersey Zinc, Western Auto Supply "A" and Ford Motor of Canada "B" were among other issues showing the widest gains.

Fractional improvement was shown by American Gas, Cities Service, Niagara Hudson, Pan-American Airways and Pioneer Gold. Electric Bond & Share and International Petroleum were sluggish, and unchanged to a trifle lower.

Bridgeport Brass

New York Stock Exchange has received notice from Brigeport Brass Company of proposed increase in authorized capital stock from 700,000 shares to 1,000,000 shares.

NEW HAVEN R. R.

Flood LOSSES Huge

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The New Haven Railroad is not yet ready to submit a plan of reorganization to the courts and stockholders and must ask for an extension of time beyond April 23, the date required by law.

President Howard S. Palmer told stockholders at the annual meeting that while a committee of directors under Edward G. Buckland had been actively at work more time is needed to complete a fair and reasonable plan.

At the same time, President Palmer threw some official light on expenses incurred during the flood. The increase in operating expenses of $500,000 in the first quarter does not reflect the total loss. At the same time, it is necessary to take into consideration the revenues lost from curtailed traffic movements. President Palmer estimates the total loss will range between $750,000 and $1,000,000, and may exceed the maximum figure.

While weather conditions may not be to the liking of merchants in New England they have improved sufficiently to provide a considerable increase in retail sales. Dun & Bradstreet commenting on this say that business is now on its way to continue the gains heretofore recorded. Wholesalers in all lines are noting more activity and the trade service believes retailers will continue to score volume gains exceeding last year. Hardware and shoes are particular bright spots, with the last named moving so well an increase in manufacturing is expected.

Notebook: Public Service of New Jersey is in favor with the chartists . . . Who saw a good base formed around 40 . . . And expect a move above the old high . . . Rail shares have lost their pep . . . Natural enough following a very selective move . . . Textile issues take heart when Woolen preferred starts up . . . But the group is up against it for favorable news . . . The social philosophy of the administration is really disturbing to some financial men . . . And it is not to be put off by claiming it is simply a matter of politics.

The best description of the present market that we can think of is: Prices are at scary levels, but there is the definite impression of "unfinished business" to be gathered from tape scrutiny and chart study. That is why we think many observers who are inclined to be bearish are advising caution instead of an aggressive selling policy. One last attempt on the upside is expected and it should provide the heaviest volume seen in some time. We will not, however, suggest any expansion of trading positions in here.

Ticker Talk: One thing in favor of the market at the moment is the sustained interest attributed to foreign traders . . . Buying orders in utilities for London accounts are reported . . . And coppers are attracting continental operators . . . Douglas Aircraft is putting on a lively show . . . But as yet there is no sign the recent reaction has run its course . . . After the protracted sidewise movement it is smart to wait for definite exhaustion on the downside before reinstating positions sold higher up.

AMOSKEAG Plan Approved

Stockholders of Amoskeag Manufacturing Co. approved plan for reorganization and amendments to the declaration of trust over the objections of Lawrence J. Harrington, prominent Nashua manufacturer.

The meeting was adjourned until May 6, at which time it may be necessary to adopt other amendments if the plan is approved by the court.

Amoskeag authorities said there would be no hearing before Judge George C. Sweeney next Monday, due to the holiday, and doubted if another hearing would take place. The case now rests with the judge.

STOCK Prices Turn MIXED

TRADING QUIET

New York, April 16—Stock market traders devoted buying attention to a few oils and specialties today, virtually ignoring most of the recent leaders.

Aside from scattered favorites, the list was unable to get going. A number of issues fell back under light profit-taking. The trading pace was unusually slow.

Indian Refining, responding to a favorable annual statement, jumped more than 3 points. Others, generally reflecting business improvement, up fractions to a point or so, included American Chain, Standard Oils of Indiana and New Jersey, Sears Roebuck, American Crystal Sugar, Montgomery Ward, Case, American Smelting, Johns-Manville, Kennecott, American Telephone, Western Union, Columbian Carbon and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

Moderate losses were registered by U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Allied Chemica, du Pont, U. S. Stee, Bethlehem, General Motors, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Consolidated Edison and American Water Works.

U. S. Government securities again moved higher in the bond department. Commodity trends were mixed. Foreign currencies were narrow.

Timely Events

Although domestic industrial progress still held the market spotlight, foreign developments were not reassuring and brokerage commentators noted the disinclination of many of their customers to get far out on a buying limb pending better news from Europe.

In the building sector the F. W. Dodge Corp. reported that March construction records showed an increase of 40 per cent over the February total and were about 62 per cent higher than in the same 1935 month.

Building material prices were expected to reflect growing demand. During the past few weeks costs of lumber, lime, roofing, bricks and window glass have been raised and it was thought price levels for most construction materials were likely to go well above the 1935 peak.

Copper dealers, in view of the recent record sales of the red metal, are now discussing the possibilities of another price advance in the near future. A uniform rate of 9½ cents a pound was lately established for domestic business. Copper's statistical position, it was pointed out, has been improving rapidly both at home and abroad.

The French franc, at the start of foreign exchange transactions, was .00⅛ of a cent firmer at 6.59⅜ cents and sterling was up ⅛ of a cent at $4.94⅞.

REPUBLIC STEEL Acquisition

Cleveland, O., April 16 (INS)—Another addition to the growing Republic Steel Corporation family was revealed here today when Republic spokesmen confirmed reports of the acquisition of the Niles Steel Products Company, small manufacturer of pressed steel products in Niles, O.

Details are being completed and purchase plans have been worked out with the company's stockholders, bondholders and creditors, the spokesmen said.

Comments of Brokers

Expect further irregularity, as individual issues attempt to feel out the volume of overhanging offerings. Utilities appear in better shape than either rails or industrials. — H. D. Comer — Paine, Webber & Co.

Sooner or later we look for a resumption of strength in the oil group.—J. S. Wilson—Josephthal & Co.

Before drawing any definite conclusions with respect to the probable direction of the next important movement, we must first observe the character of support on a secondary reaction, following a completion of the technical rebound from the lows established yesterday. — J. E. Molloy — Hornblower & Weeks.

Selectivity will continue to dominate the market, with representative issues in different groups forging ahead to new high levels from time to time.—R. S. Feigus—Prentice, Blauner & Brady.

There is little inducement to large holders of stocks to let go and the result is a rather quiet trading market without any change in the advance in the main price trend. Therefore, a bullish policy remains unwarranted.—J. P. Maher—Shields & Co.

Discretion would call for the awaiting of a new tested resistance range before further expanding intermediate swing positions.—J. S. Bache & Co.

GAIN IN Latin America TRADE

GOOD BUSINESS MAJOR FACTOR

The Alexander Hamilton Institute finds that the foreign trade of the United States with the Latin American countries increased materially during 1935.

This country's imports from all of the Latin American countries were 24.3 per cent larger in 1935 than during 1934.

Exports from the United States to Latin America, on the other hand, showed a total increase of only 12 per cent.

The trade between the United States and Latin America clearly disproves the theory that the devaluation of the currency results in an increase in exports and in a decline in imports.

The foreign trade of the United States with Latin America as well as with other countries has definitely shown that the movement of international trade under present conditions is primarily determined by business conditions prevailing in the various countries.

Improvement

The improvement in business conditions in the United States has resulted in an increased demand for various types of raw materials. Similarly the drought during the past year, which materially reduced the output of agricultural commodities, necessitated an increase in imports of these commodities. The trade of Latin America shows the same tendency.

Those countries which have enjoyed increased business activity such as Mexico, Argentina, Chile, Peru, have increased their imports from the United States.

On the other hand, countries which have not yet benefited materially from an improvement in business conditions such as Costa Rica, Honduras and Venezuela, have actually imported less from the United States during 1935 than during 1934.

Gold Withdrawals Continue Heavy

Paris, April 16 (AP)—Further heavy withdrawals of gold were shown today in the Bank of France's statement for the week ended April 10.

The statement reported the withdrawal of 945,000,000 francs worth of gold during the week. (The franc is currently valued at about 6.6 cents).

During the last three weeks, 2,728,000,000 francs in gold have been drained from the vaults. The withdrawals were due to the franc weakening under the war scare growing out of Germany's reoccupation of the Rhineland.

The bank's gold reserves have fallen to 62,972,000,000 francs, but a reduction in the banknote circulation from 84,581,000,000 to 83,841,000,000 francs enabled the bank to show a 67.03 per cent coverage on sight obligations.

BOSTON & MAINE Seeking Loan

Washington, April 16 (INS)—The Boston & Maine railroad today asked the ICC for authority to issue notes for $2,000,000 to secure a government loan of that amount. The loan will be used in repairs to the road's line damaged by recent floods.

Washington Notebook

Washington, April 16 (AP)—New orders for air-conditioning equipment booked in February by 98 manufacturers reporting to the census bureau increased to $2,611,241, compared with $2,323,534 in January, a gain of 12.9 per cent. No comparison was available with the 1935 months.

The United States supplanted Russia as the leading supplier of petroleum products to Spain last year, the Commerce Department reports. Receipts of American oil products increased to 318,028 metric tons from 259,381 in 1934, accounting for 36 per cent of the total . . . The Russian share dropped to 21 from 51.5 per cent . . .

The Reconstruction Corp. has called for bids to be opened April 23 on $17,460,000 of Pennsylvania Railroad 4 per cent notes, originally acquired by the Public Works Administration on equipment loans.

The daily average run of crude oil to refineries, as compiled by the Bureau of Mines, increased in February to 2,811,000 barrels, compared with 2,767,000 in January and 2,529000 in February, 1935. Crude oil stocks at refineries fell nearly 2,000,000 barrels during the month to 56,286,000.

B. C. FORBES

Index OF HOW U. S. Heads

By B. C. Forbes

Has it become unnecessary, is it going to become unnecessary, in this country for individuals to safeguard their dependents financially?

Because of politicians' promises, is it perfectly safe to spend every penny of income and trust to the government to provide all necessary money to take care of one's old age and, after death, one's family? Has self-reliance become wholly needless? Is reliance upon public relief wise?

* * *

Addressing a large gathering of life insurance underwriters, I ventured the opinion that a more important mission than ever before has lately devolved upon them, albeit, perhaps, a more difficult mission.

The New Deal's so-called social security law holds out promise of public support during idleness and financial provision for old age.

The result has been to create a sense of security which is neither healthy nor warranted.

It has dulled ambition to put forth every effort to become self-supporting, independent of public aid.

* * *

Anything which induces an individual or family or nation to become self-indulgent, to abandon self-restraint, self-denial, is shot through with peril.

That nation which abandons saving is lost.

It is no coincidence that the rise of America to world leadership has been accompanied by the rise of its savings to totals not even approached by any other nation.

Someone has to save money before even a small factory can be built, before a mile of railroad can be laid, before a power plant can be established, before a bank can be opened, before machinery can be purchased, before employment can be provided.

* * *

Insurance definitely is a form of saving. It definitely involves temporary self-sacrifice. It definitely embodies foresight. It definitely reflects the spirit of self-respect, self-reliance, the spirit of aversion to all thought of having to accept charity.

It is infinitely creditable to Americans that 60,000,000 life insurance policies have been bought. It is infinitely creditable to Americans that individual and family protection to the extent of $100,000,000,000 is being paid for.

* * *

But this laudable showing was achieved before, not since, the New Dealers began to distribute largesse with unrestrained lavishness, before Washington proclaimed that everybody would be fed and clothed and sheltered by a Federal Santa Claus whether working or idling, before any Federal administration created the impression that it was wholly unnecessary for anybody to toil and sweat and save in order to insure comfort in old age.

* * *

"It is up to you men who sell life insurance," I declared, "to fight the spreading of the insidious, mischievous, devitalizing notion that industriousness, frugality, self-denial, saving have become outworn, outlawed virtues and that any and every individual and family can count confidently upon being adequately provided for by a Washington Santa Claus."

* * *

The truth is that drastic decline in life insurance purchasing, drastic decline in desire to save, drastic decline in endeavor to guard against necessity for charity would portend national decay.

Particularly imperative is it that the younger generation be set straight in their social, economic, financial thinking, that they be warned against becoming reconciled to being leaners, that they have drummed into them "the glorious privilege of being independent" and the unhappiness and indignity ordinarily accompanying acceptance of financial aid from others.

* * *

It would not be an exaggeration to say that the volume of savings invested in insurance will afford one guide to the destiny of the American people.

* * *

What is the answer going to be?

(Copyright, 1936, by B. C. Forbes)

ANNOUNCEMENTS

3 Bids and Proposals

City of Somerville—Engineering Department. P. W. A. Project.
Docket No. 7630-C.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

1. The Mayor of the City of Somerville invites sealed proposals for the construction of Sewerage works in Somerville. The Contractor is to furnish all materials and labor to lay an 15-inch Clay Pipe Separate System Sewer in Broadway, Cross Street and Pearl Street. Proposals prepared in accordance with instructions contained in the contract documents, will be received at the office of the City Engineer, City Hall, Somerville, Massachusetts, until 12 Noon, Eastern Standard Time, on Thursday, April 30, 1936, and at that time and place publicly opened and read.

Plans, specifications, and other contract documents may be examined without charge or may be secured at the office of the City Engineer, at the above address, upon the deposit payment of $5.00. Said deposit will be refunded if all documents are returned in good condition on or before the opening date of bids.

Each proposal must be accompanied by a properly certified check on a responsible bank or trust company for the sum of two thousand ($2000.00), made payable to the City of Somerville, Massachusetts.

All checks, except that of the bidder to whom the contract is awarded, will be returned after execution of the contract on demand.

The project is to be financed and constructed under the terms of the National Industrial Recovery Act 1933 and Chapter 366, Mass. Acts of 1933, as amended, and attention is called to the "Construction Regulations" prescribed by the P. W. A.

Attention is called to the fact that minimum wage rates are established for the project, and are set forth in the contract documents.

The office of the United States Employment Bureau designated by the Government for this project is as follows: State Public Employment Office, (O. M. Talbot, Manager), 50 Bow Street, Somerville, Mass.

The right is reserved by the City of Somerville, Massachusetts, acting through its Mayor, to reject any or all bids, or to accept any bid which it deems most advantageous, subject to the approval of the State Director, P. W. A.

No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of thirty (30) days after the date set for the opening thereof.

A surety bond by a company satisfactory to the State Director, P. W. A., and in an amount equal to one hundred (100) per cent of the contract price will be required from the successful bidder.

LEON G. AYER,
City Engineer.
LESLIE E. KNOX,
Mayor of the City of Somerville.

The Result of Pinks and Punks in Government

BETWEEN THE POLITICIANS and THE COMMUNISTS the American merchant marine is suffering badly.

Disquieting occurrences are multiplying amazingly.

The Mis-Deal Administration at Washington, in its mad zeal to change everything, has just about scrapped the wise and constructive Jones-White Shipping Act without being able in three years to provide anything feasible or satisfactory as a substitute.

Secretary Roper's Department of Commerce finds itself involved in ignoble controversies and assailed by suspicions of gross incompetence.

Charges are made that its Steamboat Inspection Service is undermanned and frustrated; following this, and evidently as a reprisal, two departmental subalterns are curtly dismissed.

ON THE Pacific Coast, where not long ago a dock strike ran into a general strike, a mutiny on a steamship—clearly a matter for the severities of maritime law to punish—is dismissed as a "mere labor difficulty" by the UNWARRANTED INTERVENTION of Secretary of Labor Perkins.

An American ship returns from abroad, reporting mutinous disorders in a foreign port.

From 300 to 500 mysterious "interruptions" in the sailings of American ships, imputed to Communist disturbers, are ordered investigated.

In New York City—with Mayor LaGuardia, as usual, doing nothing—an outlaw strike by a Communist "union" endangers life and property on the local waterfront and threatens to spread along the whole Atlantic and Gulf littoral.

THE Communists KNOW what they want; they want strife, demoralization and suffering; they know how to cause these provocative things.

And a bureaucratic, if not Communistic, Administration dawdles and procrastinates—and has not yet satisfied even itself as to why the Morro Castle was burned, with many of its passengers, off the New Jersey shore.

The fact is that, by sympathizing with Communists and by tolerating their revolutionary tactics, THE RAW DEAL POLITICIANS have been steadily letting them get out of hand.

So THE RAW DEAL POLITICIANS, equally with THE COMMUNISTS, are to blame for the immediate and possibly critical situation.

Moreover, unless THE POLITICIANS change their methods quickly, the troubles now occurring in the shipping industry are but a symptom of what is to come in other industries.

FORTUNATELY, the American shipping industry is operated by competent men, and the legitimate International Seamen's Union of America abides by its contracts.

Together they can cope with great difficulties.

But they should not have to fight Government ineptitude, if not outright demagogic hostility in public office, while at the same time FIGHTING A COMMUNIST INVASION.

They should have the LOYAL and the ABLE support of GOVERNMENT, both NATIONAL and LOCAL.

Patriotic and Reasonable

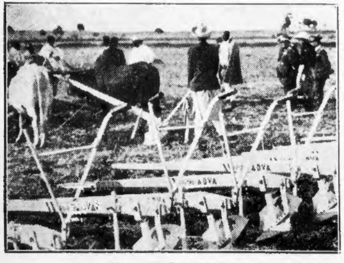
Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin's ban on cheaply manufactured foreign automobile light bulbs is as patriotic as it is reasonable.

Adequate lighting is a necessity on the crowded highways of today. To save five cents on a bulb and to menace the lives of others as a result is almost a criminal act on the part of any motorist.

As important as the safety measures embodied in the Registrar's action will be its economic benefits. Every dollar invested in domestic bulbs is a dollar added to American business and wages.

The "Buy American" policy is the depression's worst enemy. Patriotic citizens should give it the support it needs.

Plows Follow Bayonets



(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

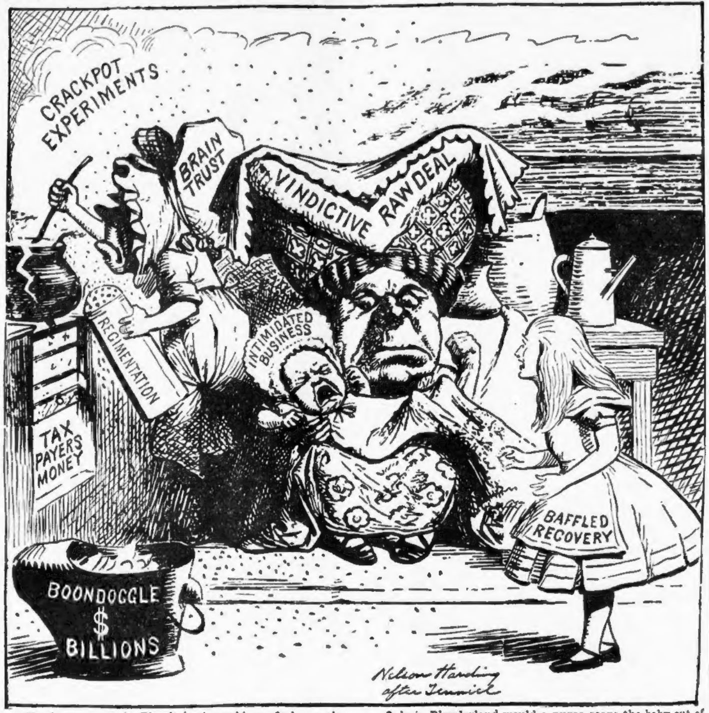
The allegory, Beating Plowshares Out of Bayonets, is inferred in this picture from the captured area of Ethiopia.

Here are Italian soldiers following a fleet of plows and making a harvest field of the former battleground.

It will be remembered Mussolini's announced purpose for invading Ethiopia was to acquire new territory for food production. With that purpose the picture seems to be in agreement.

(M)Alice in Blunderland

By Nelson Harding



Nowhere except in Blunderland would we find a cook bungling with worthless concoctions in a cracked pot, and shaking Red pepper all over the place.

"Speak roughly to your little boy
And beat him when he sneezes.
He only does it to annoy
Because he knows it teases!"

Only in Blunderland would a nurse scare the baby out of a year's growth, beat it because the pepper makes it sneeze and shout this soothing lullaby:

"I speak severely to my boy;
I beat him when he sneezes,
For he could thoroughly enjoy
The pepper when he pleases!"

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, April 16—New York's chief point of interest for the sight-seer is by long odds Radio City. With the Empire State building next, Europeans, where skyscrapers are so little known, make the Empire their first stop, but the American tourists prefer the broadcast studios.

Radio City for a few months after its opening offered a depressing spectacle of empty store and office space. No one could admire its architectural extravaganza without experiencing a wince at its devastating, costly desolation. Many believed it would be the city's No. 1 eyesore.

The few magnificent establishments that lodged there appeared entirely lost in what many thought a building blunder.

A mistake that might impair one of America's largest fortunes. The change to opulence was not gradual. The area bloomed over night. Like magic.

The new steamship center congealed en masse. A dozen ultra shopping strips gobbled up large and small vacancies. The horticultural decorations made it a bower of beauty. In fact, its rise out of almost hopeless inertia has been one of the major triumphs of the let down.

Fay Templeton, a good trouper playing many parts in a distinguished career, refused to permit sniveling over a sudden role in real life—a gentle rocker on the porch of an actors' home. When her plight was discovered, she sent out word: "I'm fine and happy."

Miss Templeton like many others, thought she had arrived at retirement years with material sufficiency for comfort, only to find her safety vault box held worthless scraps of paper. But when her plight became known she became a hostess in a Pittsburgh hotel. Then the flood!

Frank Fay returns to Hollywood with something of a personal as well as professional triumph. For several years he had winnowed the studios' coldest stare and his domestic life was mussed up as the result of his divorce by the lovely Barbara Stanwyck.

His success on the Vallee hour, however, was one of the spectaculars of the year. So the prodigal goes back as the star of sponsored radio program and likely his choosing of a cinema role.

In a booth at Lindy's a recent evening, someone informs me, the occupants were George Burns and Gracie Allen, Fred and Portland Allen, the Jack Bennys and the Goodman Aces. Each couple happily married, all the husbands comedians working with comedienne wives.

Also, although in a highly competitive field and, both men and women, exploiting almost the identical brand of humor, the four couples are the staunchest friends and often spend relaxing hours together.

My informant also says the dinner party seemed razored of humor. The conversation to appearances was scattery, monosyllabic, dry.

One of the newest of the bright young advertising whizzes is Fred Smith, who at the age of 27 is the youngest major executive in the larger agencies. He came from Troy, Ohio, three years ago to write fiction, landed in a few pulps but became so discouraged he was about to return to his home town.

One morning he walked into the advertising agency and in the eloquency of despair talked himself into a copy writing job. From that he went like a shot to more important posts.

Such happenings are especially pert in face of the constant yowling youth no longer has opportunity. That the Big Chance is dead!

Sudden memory: The yellow water bucket and tin dipper on the little bench beside the kitchen stoop.

Thingumabobs: Roy Howard's checkered shirts caused crowds to follow him in Moscow when he went to interview Stalin . . . Noel Coward's latest is white shirts with vivid colored collars . . . Gov. Alf Landon likes a good Oppenheim mystery . . . Raeburn Van Buren, successful magazine illustrator, still attends art classes . . . Anthony Eden likes green olives with salt for breakfast . . . Heywood Broun dines with his mother once a week and is always lectured for his union labor sympathies . . . The smart shops of Paris are leaving the rue de la Paix for the Faubourg St. Honore.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

I get a wallop out of watching the "big shots" strut their stuff—

Seeing the "wild ones" dazzle 'em—

Listening to "tall tales" from the reckless adventurers, the red-hot rebels and flaming non-conformists.

You get a wallop, too, don't you? And many a pang of envy. You think how wonderful your life might have been if you could have lived like that—so dramatically, so bravely.

"But I wouldn't have the courage," you whisper to yourself. "I wouldn't dare do the things those people do. It's true—I don't like my life. It's terribly monotonous to drudge along like this, doing the same thing day after day. Plugging down to the office—plugging back. Cooking three meals over the same old stove every day, washing the same old dishes, darning the same old socks.

"Yes, I certainly get sick of it all. But I guess I've got to face it. For I'm not brave enough to be wild and free—I haven't spunk enough to be a rebel or a tramp."

A GENERAL PLAINT

That's what you're saying, isn't it, partner? I know, for you've said it to me for 17 years, in thousands of letters. Weary letters, scribbled on a corner of the kitchen sink. Worried letters, written on some battered old desk after the boss had gone.

And so today I'm going to answer all those letters. I'm going to tell you something that will pin no medals on me, but will possibly ease that ache in your own heart. And bolster up that faltering pride.

I'm going to tell you the truth—the deep, inside truth about the Wild and the Free. And I can tell you that truth because I've been one of them.

I've been a maverick all my life. Out on the ranges from where I come a maverick is an unbranded steer or cow that belongs to no herd and acknowledges no corral. There are human mavericks as well as bovine ones, and all my life I've been one of them.

But I'm telling you, stranger, that it would have taken more sheer courage for me to sit down as you have done and do my daily round and stay in my dutiful rut than it ever has taken to lead any riot or run any risk.

CAN'T ERASE PAST

I'm not proud of saying this. I'm not proud of the hurt I've given and the fences I've broken and the waste I've left behind me. If I had it to do over I'd be different. I'd be really brave instead of just looking the part.

But we can't undo the fool things we've done. Yet we can, if we're decent—and if we come to have a little real courage at last—use our own folly to heal the Other Fellow's hurt.

So that's why I, who have been a maverick, am telling you that we "wild ones" are not so hot. There's more gallantry and courage functioning in dark little kitchens and shabby offices than ever strutted under any spotlight.

And you can lift your tired head from the dishpan, Mary, and your weary hands from the machine bench, John, and stop wishing that you might have been a hero.

For here stands one before you, her hat in her hand, her hand on her heart, who salutes you because YOU ARE!

"Dear Govt." -:- -:- By Winston Norman

Campain Dept.
DEMOCRAT PARTY
DEAR PARTY:

The New Deal looks pretty bright on my block, because the man that wanted to split the Democrat Party has just give up the ghost & signed one of them ON WITH ROOSEVELT pledge cards.

I asked him how he came to change his mind, & he says, "My mind hasen't changed none, I am signing up for Roosevelt on acct. of Stummick Trouble."

"What kind of Stummick Trouble?" I says.

"Trouble filling it," he says to me. "My Stummick just growled at me and says there won't be no Refreshments at a Third Party. My stummick says I better not take a walk with Al Smith, so I am going to give up & let Farley take me for a ride."

That was good news, and this man told me that most of the prominent stummicks in the Democrat Party have changed their mind like his did. "It looks like our Campaign Slogan will be ON WITHOUT SMITH," he says, "and when Al takes his walk it will be the biggest Solo-Hop since Lindbergh."

He says there wasn't no use of a 3rd Party trying to fight the Capatalist System, because Mr. Roosevelt has 4 Billion Dollars to pass around, & that makes him the biggest Capatalist the world has ever saw.

"Al Smith says we will have to take a walk with him, or else get our Cloak of Hypocrasy & put it on," he says. "There is going to be so many backslid Democrats in the Cloak of Hypocrasy that it will look like a Circus Tent."

Yours, truly,
W. NORMAN

The Appeal of a Home

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

Vaudeville singers, living in hall bedrooms, and rarely familiar with real homes, always tap the fount of tears when they sing of home. The home song is quite as evocative as "mammy" the main standby of those who would stir mass emotion.

Business is finding out what Tin Pan Alley always knew.

Richards S. Reynolds, president of the Reynolds Corporation, summons poets and writers to whoop it up for the home. He gets in Joseph Auslander, a journeyman poet of high standing, and between them they toss off some home verses which aren't half bad. Audrey Wurdemann, Pulitzer prize winner, who is Mrs. Auslander, also lends a hand. Mr. Reynolds' pump-priming poem was:

"Build me a home, I am lonely,
"Lonely for a chimney and cat.
"I've been about and I've found out
"Life's too big for a flat."

Mrs. Auslander contributes:

"Build me a home, I am hungry
"For the bark of a dog on the lane,
"For the sight of a light in a window at night,
"And the song of a roof in the rain."

Pretty snappy rhyming there and some nice feeling. But suppose you worked in "housing" instead of home. "Federal housing would stop all this sousing," or something like that. It just wouldn't come off.

THE HOME'S APPEAL

You can't match the "Federal Housing Administration," "slum clearance" or anything like that against "The Little Gray Home in the West," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Home on the Range," "Keep the Home Fires Burning" or even Eddie Guest's apostrophe of the lot of living which it takes to make a home—that is, you can't match them in public appeal.

In our day dreams, we picture that little rose-bowered home, but scientific housing leaves us cold. The New Dealers are finding this out. Down in the South, in the wide outreach of resettlement, rural electrification, marginal land clearance and all the rest of it, about the toughest thing they have to uproot is a home.

They can restring railroads and power lines, re-route or dam rivers, drain swamps, reforest highlands, rub out factories or cotton patches, but when it comes to disturbing one of those mountain shacks with a persimmon tree in front of it, that starts fighting talk.

These sagging old frame cabins with an outside 'dobe chimney at one end are nothing to brag about, or cry about. They probably are all that any Ph.D. statistical housing expert says of them.

The land is probably barren and scrubby; sow-belly and hard tack sustenance is meagre, and miasma, beri-beri, pellagra and hookworm are added embellishments.

BUT IT'S HOME, and there it will stay as long as a squirrel gun and a pack of houn' dogs can keep it there.

They are quaint little cabins, vine-hung on a hillside, with smoke rising from the chimney at dusk, just the kind of homes that get into songs. The city men, living in steam-heated flats and pumping up poetry about homes, wouldn't live in them.

A NATIONAL PROBLEM

The "song of a roof in the rain" would be a bit sour when the roof was leaking. If there could be an exchange system something like exchange professorships, with a Park avenue real estate dealer living in a Blue Ridge shack, and the hill-billy discovering comfort in a New York flat, sentiment might yield something to practicality and vice versa.

It might be a good idea, too, for the New Dealers to renovate their millennial prospectus and take out such denatured words as housing and substitute the word "home." The name does affect the smell of the rose.

"Home" is a word which belongs in traditional America. It is intimately linked with the pioneer tradition of an inviolable person and locale. People have fought for a home. Nobody ever died for "housing."

But, regardless of what's in a name, housing is the No. 1 item in any sensible reconstruction program in America today. Competent authorities have estimated that about 70 per cent of the homes of America are below par when it comes to rudimentary conveniences and sanitation. There are in New York city 2,000,000 dwellings below this level.

There has been a shift toward a policy of spurring private enterprise to the job with the stimulus of easier credit. The problem is bound up with vast and economic forces, including what many authorities agree is the inevitable decentralization in great population areas.

Can we engage successfully in this kind of effort and yet get and keep the kind of home that Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Auslander sing about? That seems to be the nub of the whole thing.

Boondogglers' Convention

By Benjamin DeCasseres

SCENE: The Convention Auditorium in Philadelphia on June 23, 1936.

PERMANENT CHAIRMAN: The National Convention of Boondogglers will please come to order.

A VOICE: I move that we dispense with the usual opening prayer and substitute for it a reading from Lenin's "Letter to American Workers."

DR. TUGWELL: I second the motion!

A VOICE: Thomas Jefferson said—

SENATOR GUFFEY: He's old hat. Does the delegate think this is a Democratic Convention?

A VOICE: Three cheers for George the Third!

AL SMITH: The Constitution is still—

A VOICE: No horse-and-buggy stuff here, Al!

GROUP-SINGING: "We care not who makes a nation's laws if we can handle the relief funds."

A VOICE: Let us reaffirm the Democratic platform of 1932.

A HUNDRED VOICES: Throw him out!

* * *

A VOICE: Thomas Jefferson said—

TWO HUNDRED VOICES: Ha! Ha! Ha! Ho! Ho! He! He! He!

THE CHAIR: Order! Order! We're not SURGING FORWARD an inch.

A VOICE: I represent the Great Pork Barrel Belt.

JAMES A. FARLEY: What's that?

A VOICE: Our platform should say—

A VOICE: We can adopt a platform after election.

A VOICE: I'm a farmer—

A VOICE: Show your Agricultural Adjustment Administration dead-hog check!

THE CHAIR: Gentlemen, a message from the Moscow Comintern.

(The band plays several bars from the "Internationale" and "Solidarity.")

VOICES: Browder! Browder!

HENRY MORGENTHAU, JR.: I am pleased to report that the national debt is now nearing the forty thousand million mark.

A VOICE: As Patrick Henry said, "Give me liberty or give me debts!"

SENATOR BLACK: I move that all the private correspondence and telegrams of all the citizens of the country be seized!

A VOICE: Taxes——

A HUNDRED AND TEN VOICES: Give us bigger and better taxes!

* * *

A VOICE: What became of the four billion eight hundred and eighty million dollars that—

TWO HUNDRED VOICES: Traitor! Traitor! Throw him out!

(The band plays "Let Me Call You Sweetheart"—all the delegates rising.)

THE CHAIR: Gentlemen, we'll never get anywhere if——

TWENTY VOICES: Who said we wanted to GET anywhere? We've been THERE for three years and four months!

A VOICE: Make the band play "Tammanee! Tammanee!"

JAMES A. FARLEY: Hey, don't get personal.

AL SMITH: Chief Justice Marshall said that the power to tax was the power to——

A VOICE: Ox-cart stuff!

* * *

DR. TUGWELL: Intrenched greed and well-stocked clubs are setting back the coming of Der Tag!

THE Convention (springing to its feet): Down with intrenched greed and well-stocked clubs and long live the dictatorship of the proletariat!

A VOICE: The Supreme Court—

A HUNDRED VOICES: He thinks he's in America!

THE CHAIR: Gentlemen!

A VOICE: We are not gentlemen—we're proletarians. Throw the Chairman out! (He's thrown out.)
